Culligan
better water. pure and simple.

Eliminate residue on your hair and skin because, well, it's residue.

Hard water leaves a film on your body, making it difficult for you to feel truly clean. A Culligan® Water Softener reduces minerals and eliminates hard water buildup, leaving your skin soft and your hair shiny. You'll wonder how you ever left the house covered in filth. Experience the difference Culligan can make. Visit us at CULLIGAN.com.

Have you heard the Buzz?

THE BAITING HOLLOW CLUB

We've just added 52 acres of rolling terrain to the Robert Trent Jones, Sr. designed Fox Hill Golf Course. Hart/Howerton Architects, known locally for the Clubhouse design of the Atlantic Golf Club and the new Sebonack Golf Club, created the conceptual design for our new clubhouse. The new clubhouse, practice facility, carts, and parking will all be accessible from a new private entrance off Warner Drive. Renowned golf course architects Hurdzan-Fry are helping with redesigning and improving our golf course to accommodate the new clubhouse and other facilities.

We have a new Superintendent!

Names, Names

Who's the Democrat? Who's the Republican? Surprised?

By Dan Rattiner

Anyone who thinks that the name a parent gives a child does not later on mold his or her behavior, has only to look at the case of two politicians in this county who are running for State office.

One of them is Treewolf West of Port Jefferson who is running for the State Assembly in this district. The other is Mike Comando of Southold, who is running for the State Senate, also from this district.

It would be nice to get these two together in the same room and hear them debate the latest issues. But that is not going to happen. If they both win, (the outcome was unknown at press time) they will be doing their debating in separate wings at opposite ends of the State Capitol building.

"We must preserve our forests and woodlands, protect our endangered birds and animals, unilaterally disarm, feed the hungry, help the poor, and reduce the military," will ring out in senatorial tones from the State Senate.

"We must protect our country and fight those who would destroy our precious democracy. We must build the strongest military in the world. The power of the bomb is the only thing that these barbarian savages who would overturn our way of life understand," will ring out in assemblatory tones from the State Assembly.

For this is America.

Mike Comando's father was Biff Comando, the famous environmentalist who saved the tree frogs of northern California from the lumber interests in the 1960s. He named his son Mike to remind him of all the microphones he spoke on while standing in the cold protest lines in the Atlas Mountains just north of Eureka as they paralyzed the home building business for six weeks in 1970.

"Never forget," was Biff's motto.

Treewolf West's father was General Fallingwater West, a half Cherokee who won the Medal of Honor and earned his fourth star at the Battle of the Hankung Reservoir in North Korea in 1951, when he rescued an entire battalion by shooting his way single-handedly into a cave guarded by more than 400 enemy soldiers and then leading the men to safety. He named his son Treewolf in memory of the American Tree Wolf sniper unit that massacred a whole entire division of Japs as they came ashore to reinforce the beleaguered Japanese army on Guadalcanal in 1944.

"Never forget," was Fallingwater's motto.

What? You say I've got this backwards? •

SMELLS GOOD? COVER IT UP OR SHUT IT DOWN

By David Lion Rattiner

Sometimes people debate about funny things in the Hamptons. If you haven't heard about the ongoing saga between restaurateur Mark Smith and the Southampton Town Planning Board over a barbeque smell, you've been really missing a fine small-town drama. As reported in this newspaper, Mr. Smith has been trying vigorously to get approval to revive the dead building along Rt. 27, formerly Alison by The Beach in Sagaponack, back into a restaurant. But of course, there is a lot of red tape to cut through when it comes to these matters. After all, you can't just start up a restaurant, you have to get approval and permits and things.

Well Mr. Smith has been through all of this before and being that the building once formerly housed a restaurant, everyone predicted he would probably pull it off. But there was one incredibly small detail that Mr. Smith overlooked, and that was the delicious smell that the juicy barbeque restaurant would cause. Mr. Smith of course believed that the delicious smell would be a good thing for his business and for the area as well. After all, who doesn't Fashion designer and Hamptonite Tommy Hilfiger recently put his East Hampton home on the market for $24.5 million, $7.5 million more than he paid for it five months ago. The 2.4-acre Further Lane property has 154 feet of ocean frontage and a private boardwalk leading to the water. The 4,700-square-foot, five-bedroom home has a media room, massage room, double-height living room, an infinity-edge pool overlooking the ocean and an outdoor pavilion with a fireplace. Hilfiger bought the property in May from William Roach and Robert Marc, an eyewear designer. Hilfiger did some renovations on the house and took a trip to Bali to oversee the design of custom furniture, which is available for sale but isn't included in the asking price.

Radio City Music Hall Christmas Spectacular Nov. 22nd, Dec. 12th, Dec. 19th SF; Dec. 14th NF - Price pp. varies by date. The 2006 Radio City Christmas Spectacular returns to Radio City Music Hall with a dazzling new opening number! This year's show is not to be missed. Package includes lunch at Giambelli's for South Fork trips or Hurley's for the North Fork departure. Show times and pricing vary by date. Ask your HJ representative for details.

Christmas in Williamsburg, Virginia Fri., Dec 1st – Mon., Dec. 4th (four day tour) - $559 pp./double occ. Colonial Williamsburg has been known for putting the magic into the Christmas season for decades. From the splendor of Grand Illumination to the elegant beauty of distinctive natural decorations, delicious food, and festive music make Christmas in Colonial Williamsburg's historic area an unforgettable experience. Includes 3 nights hotel accommodations, 3 breakfast buffets, 3 dinners, two-day pass to Colonial Williamsburg, night ghost tour, guided tour of Jamestown, deluxe round-trip transportation and more. SF

Mary Poppins Wed., Dec. 6th - $175 pp. Supercalifragilisticexpialidocious! Based on the books by P.L. Travers and the classic Walt Disney film, this is the story of the Banks family and how their lives change after the arrival of nanny Mary Poppins at their home. This production marks the first collaboration between Disney and Cameron Mackintosh, legendary producer of the record-breaking The Phantom of the Opera, Cats and Les Miserables. Includes front mezzanine ticket, lunch at the U.N. Delegate's Dining Room and deluxe round-trip transportation. Also available on Jan. 24th, includes orchestra ticket and lunch at a fine NYC restaurant to be determined. SF

The New York Philharmonic Presents Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra. Wynton Marsalis, Music Director; Bramwell Tovey, Conductor Sat., Dec. 9th - $165 pp. Program to include compositions by Copland, Christopher Rouse and Tchaikovsky/Ellington (Nutcracker selections). Package Includes orchestra concert ticket, dinner at one of New York City's finer restaurants and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

Les Miserables Wed., Jan. 3rd - $165 pp. Returning to Broadway for a 6-month engagement to celebrate becoming the world's longest-running musical, this legendary show based on Victor Hugo's epic novel tells the story of relentless policeman Javert's pursuit of escaped convict Jean Valjean over decades through the tumult of revolutionary France. Includes orchestra show ticket, lunch at Tavern on the Green and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

Wicked Sat., Jan. 6th - $197 pp. If you think you know the two iconic witches from Oz — the Wicked Witch (Elphaba) and the Good Witch (Glinda) — think again. Wicked takes a revisionist look at an American icon of evil and discovers how the young Elphàba, a passionate, committed young woman from Oz, becomes the Wicked Witch of the West. Her character is contrasted with that of her school roommate Glinda, who grows up to be the Good Witch. Package includes: Orchestra show ticket, lunch at La Petite Auberge and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

"1964" THE TRIBUTE AT CARNEGIE HALL – World famous Re-creation of a Live Beatles Concert Sat., Jan. 27th - $165 pp. If you are too young to have seen the Beatles in concert for yourself or if you just want to do it again, here's the chance you've been waiting for. Dubbed "the best Beatles Tribute Show on earth" by Rolling Stone Magazine. Critics and fans internationally have hailed 1964...THE TRIBUTE as the most authentic Beatles tribute in the world. For over 20 years, this group of performers has successfully re-created every sensation of being at a Beatles concert circa 1966 – from wardrobe to hairstyles, accents, singing nuances, even the scars on the vintage instruments and exact replica stage set. Includes orchestra ticket (8 pm performance), dinner at a fine NYC restaurant and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF like barbeque? Saying you don't like barbeque is like saying you don't like cookies.

Smells

Well this barbeque smell had some Southampton Town Planners a little worried. After all, a smell other than, well, let's say, farm dirt and car exhaust, was going to need to be looked into.

What makes all of this quite interesting to the average citizen of the Hamptons is the fact that barbeques SMELL GOOD. So you can see the comedy when a fierce debate broke out between the Southampton Town Planning Board and Mark Smith over a smoker (a chimney-esque type of thing) that would be installed on top of the restaurant and release delicious smelling fumes. The Southampton planners thought that the smoker needed to have restrictions. Perhaps, if the smell became a problem, some kind of air filter, like an automatic Febreze bottle of some kind, could be installed in advance, just in case they didn't like the barbeque smell and wanted to do something about it. "Should it become a nuisance," was the words that were used.

The Southampton Town Planning Board was basically saying that if his barbeque didn't smell good, then they would have legal ramifications for Mr. Smith. That's a lot of pressure for a barbeque man, and so, Mr. Smith didn't think this made much sense and wanted it to be a little bit clearer what a nuisance meant exactly. Could they shut down his business for say, a honey-barbeque smell coming from the smoker? He needed to know. Not to mention the added cost of a filtration system which cost anywhere between $2,000 and $200,000. What about the smells from other restaurants that serve barbeque like Turtle Crossing in East Hampton? What about the smell of fresh coffee in the morning at the bagel store? Where are the restrictions on them?

And so, a mini-battle broke out and reportedly, a meeting of lawyers, planners and Mr. Smith got a little spicy when it came to the dialogue at the meeting. After all, Mr. Smith wasn't talking about building a Limburger cheese restaurant called "Pepe Le Peu."

When the fair fight was over, which included lawyers, the Town Planners decided that the restriction for the smoker would be dropped after they all agreed that if there were a heavy amount of complaining from neighbors, it would be worked out.

Mr. Smith also threw them a bone, agreeing to install a ventilation system that is designed to disperse the smoke that comes out of the smoker.

And so the lesson learned here is that if you are planning on starting up a restaurant in the Hamptons, you better damn well make sure that the food smells good. It's nothing personal, we just really like the air around here is all.

A Unique Concept That Will Revolutionize Dental Implant Treatment

HAVE YOU LOST OR ARE YOU LOSING YOUR TEETH?

The Latest News from the Cut at Sagaponack Main Beach

By Dan Rattiner

I often go out on Sagg Main Beach in my Land Rover in the off-season to write a story for this newspaper on this laptop. I sit outside the car on a folding chair if it's warm enough. I keep one eye on what I am doing and one eye on what is going on.

Sunset is a beautiful time at Sagg Main Beach. East of the sand road leading out to it, there is this most beautiful scene on God's earth. At a certain point as you go east, the dunes at the back of the beach blocking the sunset give way to Sagg Pond, a calm and magnificent body of water about three miles long and a mile wide that opens out to the sea. On the beach at the eastern side of the pond, the sun sets across it over the far shore, and, for a period of about a half hour, the entire world is bathed in this pink and orange light which then fades to black.

> The two of them walked slowly down toward the water's edge with the little dog circling around them as if the three were out of some sort of fairy tale.

On Monday, October 9, I was out there just before sunset. It was a beautiful evening and I set up outside the car. Behind me, not far from the entrance to the beach, was a surfcaster in front of his pickup truck out in the sea in his waders. To the left, the surf crashed on the sand. Overhead, the birds circled excitedly, cawing madly, and once again rediscovering for the first time that the sun actually sets. Directly in front of me was the pond and the sun over the far shore.

After a while, a ragtop open jeep drove slowly past me on the beach and parked about fifty yards in front, between me and the pond. It annoyed me slightly at first — it was as if they were taking a seat to partially block my view, but the beach is a free country and the jeep is a sort of rough looking vehicle — with the back window zippered down — and it seemed appropriate that its driver would take it out to enjoy the show.

After a while, while typing away, I suddenly heard a woman's voice, very angry, saying something.

IF I WANT TO GO OUT TO … it said, and then, as it continued on at an even higher decibel, it was drowned out by the sound of the waves crashing in. It was coming from the jeep.

From where I was sitting, I could only see the silhouettes of the back of the heads of two people in that car. The driver was the taller person, with short hair. The passenger was the shorter person. And it was she who was doing the talking. The angry speech, in a midlevel soprano, went on and on. She gestured, she banged on the dashboard. The jeep shook. The sun slowly lowered.

I tried to eavesdrop, but that one phrase, IF I WANT TO GO OUT TO, coming in bright and clear on a gust of wind, was all I ever got. Sometimes, the woman gestured and looked straight ahead and sometimes she stared menacingly in the direction of the driver. But the driver just sat there, eyes front, quite still. Once, he reached up and scratched a little itch above his ear.

This went on for a good seven or eight minutes and it was bothering my view. And it was also bothering me. I hadn't come down to hear this. What the hell had he done, anyway? It went on and on and I couldn't hear any of it.

Above, the birds swooped and cawed faster. And they sent out an alarm.

Danger. Danger.

Finally, there was the sound of the jeep engine starting up and, as the shouting continued, a moving into reverse of the transmission, a grinding of gears and a making of a K turn and then a moving forward, and then they were gone. And she was still yelling.

This sunset was not working, is what I believe he was thinking as he drove by me, a sorry looking fellow indeed.

A short time later, with the sun setting further down but still not all the way down, another vehicle came slowly by me in the sand. It was a beach vehicle I had never seen down here before. A tiny Honda Element about half the size of my Land Rover. I didn't know they could go on the beach. And I'd never even seen anything that small on the beach before.

In any case, it stopped, facing the sunset almost exactly where the jeep had been — I wondered if the spot was still warm — and the driver's door opened and a little tiny dog, maybe twelve pounds, jumped joyfully down and began to run around in the sand in little circles.

Behind him, also now coming out the driver's door, was a large, brawny man wearing a sweater and jeans. He planted his feet on the ground, put his hands on his hips and looked out at the sea.

Then the passenger door opened, and out stepped a very small and very slender young woman. I could only see all three of them in silhouette at this point in the sunset, so I cannot tell you what any of them really looked like, but from my perspective, I was looking at a big brawny man and his three small beloved things. His Element, his dog and his girl.

And so it was. The girl walked happily around the car, almost skipping, and he threw a big paw around her shoulders and pulled her to him, and then the two of them walked slowly down toward the water's edge with the little dog circling around them as if the three were out of some sort of fairy tale.

The girl skipped on ahead for a minute, and she gathered seaweed into a sort of bouquet and brought it to the man, and he swept her up off her feet for a moment or two.

This went on for a while, and I watched with some curiosity and a bit of envy since my own personal beloved was not with me at this particular time, and then they got back into the Element and bounced across the ruts in the sand and headed off in the direction from which they had come.

Now it was dark. My laptop screen glowed. You never know what the hell you are going to see down at the beach. •

Staying Awake

The Secret of Living and Enjoying a Long Life is Revealed

By Dan Rattiner

As you know, scientists have no idea why some people die of natural causes at 55 and others die at 105. Those who have lived a long time get interviewed and they say they eat an apple a day, or they have a shot of whiskey every night before they go to bed, or they exercise twice a day, or they just sit in a comfortable chair all the time and have never exercised a day in their lives. It's totally baffling.

I did think, for a long time, that if you stayed calm and serene all the time you would achieve long life because you would not be stressing your system.

People would say to me — when they saw something was bothering me — calm down, you're going to kill yourself, and it wouldn't help any, but it did make me think there was some truth to this.

In fact, it was quite clear to me that people in their 90s and above had this kind of take-it-easy personality that could lead to this. Keeping calm is what did it, right?

But then I ran into a woman who was 97 who I had known when she was younger and at that time she yelled and screamed and terrified people and chewed her nails and paced around and now when I saw her she was just all mellow and quiet because she had gotten old. And then I noticed EVERYONE mellows when they get old. So there goes that theory.

In light of this, I've decided to take a different tack toward longevity. I am going to live a long time by staying awake. It is not, as a matter of fact, how long you live, but how awake you are during the time you live that determines how much of life you get to experience.

The volcano explodes and if you sleep through it, you don't know a thing about it. But if you're awake all the time that it's going off, then you get the full experience of being alive at that time.

> The Allies landed a half a million men on the French coast at Normandy during World War II, at 5 o'clock in the morning, and Adolph Hitler slept through it

So my plan is to stay up until 3 in the morning every night and wake up at 7. Nothing's going to happen on my watch I don't know about.

Do the math. If someone lives to be 75 and during all that time gets eight good hours of sleep every night, how does that compare to someone who is also 75 years old but gets four hours a night?

The person who gets eight hours of sleep is awake sixteen hours a day. But the person who gets four hours of sleep gets 20 hours of being awake a day. That's 25% more.

I CAN LIVE TO BE 75 BUT GET THE EQUIVALENT OF 100. AND I DON'T EVEN HAVE TO DO ALL THAT EXTRA LIVING.

Many creative people sleep only four hours a night. Perhaps the most famous of them was Thomas Edison who said he got by with only four hours of sleep a night and lived to do all his inventions and enjoy everything that was going on right up into his eighties, which, when he died, was the equivalent of being 110 by my calculations.

One of the most famous sleepers, on the other hand, was actor Ronald Reagan, who became President but spent his entire life making speeches written by somebody else. He was a friendly fellow, it is true, and he got along. But that was about it. Between his naps and his long nights in the sack, he might have lived to be 93, which he did, but according to the math, he really died having lived only 54 years.

Lots happens late at night or very early in the morning. The Allies landed a half a million men on the French coast at Normandy during World War II, at 5 o'clock in the morning, and Adolph Hitler slept through it and his staff refused all requests to wake him because he had told them he did not want to be disturbed.

Captain Smith was asleep in his quarters when the Titanic hit the iceberg in the North Atlantic in 1911. They had to wake him up.

And Lindbergh landed in Paris while almost everybody in America slept, and everybody had to learn about it second-hand when they woke up in the morning in 1926. It was the night owls who got to jump up and down and clap and high five one another.

And consider prize fighters. They get knocked out by one punch and when they wake up they don't even know what all the excitement had been about.

The gurus say live in the present, and be here now. Don't sleep your life away. And what's the big deal about sleep? Mostly it's about being chased by a monster or trapped in a building or lost in a strange city you never even knew existed. So it's not pleasant. They even have a word for it. Nightmares. And of course when you wake up, you realize it wasn't even you. Sleep is very overrated.

And sleep is not safe. When you are asleep, somebody could come along and bash you in the head. That's not the case when you are awake. When you are awake you can defend yourself. There's a lot to be said about lying there just resting up and enjoying the experience — the rain on the windows, the dog on the floor besides your sofa thumping away scratching himself, the TV droning on and reporting right there on-the-spot that they've got a cure for cancer — and you absorbing it all as you recharge your batteries after a long day of doing things.

Beats the hell out of being asleep. And you get to live to be the equivalent of 100 by my calculations.

I need to write a whole book about this. •

Sometimes Being the Dentist-to-the-Stars Has Its Drawbacks

By Dan Rattiner

We all know how hard it is to find out if a particular doctor or dentist is good or bad. There is no online service you can go to get reviews. There is no rating system. About the only thing you can do is ask friends and then friends of friends and then friends of friends of friends for a recommendation.

Of course, doctors and dentists know this too, so a proctologist with a toothache is in the same boat you are.

On the other hand, doctors and dentists also know that if you can snag a famous person as a patient, a king or president, or a millionaire or an academy award winning actor, you're three quarters the way home, as far as your practice goes.

If Liza Minelli uses you as a dentist, her sister Lorna Luft may not be far behind. And if fashion model Devon Aoki comes to sit in your dentist chair, her father Rocky Aoki, who founded the Benihana Restaurant chain and has a house in Westhampton Beach, and maybe Nicola Bulgari, owner of the jewelry company BVLGARI, will soon be knocking on your door. And from there, it's the rest of the world.

Which was the case for Hamptons dentist-to-the-stars Robert Veligdan, who, if he has survived the following ordeal, has a practice on Central Park South and a summer home on Moriches Bay just 15 minutes from downtown Westhampton Beach, and also all of the above mentioned famous celebrities as patients.

After all, it may be good for a dentist to have such patients, but it is bad, very bad, when about half of the above named patients start litigation against you.

If Liza Minelli uses you as a dentist, her sister Lorna Luft may not be far behind.

Veligdan's troubles apparently all revolve around the same behavior. It is alleged he gets you in his office, he sits you down, has you open your mouth wide, begins to probe around and then begins to talk about this terrific medical company that is looking for investors. He's invested himself. The company, Eye Care International, is like gold. And he highly recommends that you join in.

And it goes further. Here is what is alleged in various lawsuits.

"(He) allegedly uses his professional status as dentist to instill trust, then fails to inform his patients that he was a director in the company in which he urges them to invest, pressures his patients by telling them if they didn't immediately buy stock the window of opportunity would close, that he was so sure about ECI reaping huge profits within months that he, Veligdan, would buy back the stock shares at any time if the investor became dissatisfied. (In his discussions), he failed to note that the stock shares would be 'restricted,' he failed to respond later when asked about ECI and he evaded communicating with you when you tried to sell back the shares back to him as he said."

Among those suing "Dr. Bob" Veligdan are Rocky Aoki of Benihana, German fashion designer Petra Mielke and a woman named Mia Lancaster, who is not a celebrity but is instead the owner of a company called "A Place for Cats," and who, at one time, was Dr. Bob's girlfriend.

Aoki invested $50,000, Mielke invested $18,000 and Lancaster invested $5000. It is unknown how much Bulgari invested. All three have filed second complaints with the same message to the New York State

review: morpurgo auction II

By Christian McLean

Seventy percent of me felt like just reprinting our article from the Morpurgo auction that took place on the steps of Sag Harbor's municipal building last year, because the same thing happened. That thing being nothing — no bidders, just a bunch of onlookers, waiting for something big. So what's the story then? Why does the non-auction of the Morpurgo house really make news? It's the people involved. What we have here is a terrible, terrible family battle. Two sisters, getting on in their years, who are engrossed in a legal dispute which has slowly but surely created a great divide between them.

Both claim the other doesn't have a leg to stand on. Helga has the law on her side, while Annselm is hell bent on challenging the legal decisions made by Suffolk County Supreme Court about who has the right to sell or not sell the house. Annselm wants to keep the house. She says the ludicrous auction prices on eBay are just a way to get people's attention and drum up support for establishing an arts center on the premises.

The auction on the steps of Sag Harbor's municipal building is a whole other, very real story. This wasn't just an auction, it was a partition auction. When two people have a stake in a property, but one doesn't want to sell, and the other is desperate to sell (Helga received a ruling for this auction by Judge Underwood) a partition auction takes place. With her attorney's assistant present, Helga was quite optimistic about selling the house. Before the auction she said that they had been contacted by several real estate offices and builders who were interested in the property. Oddly none of them showed up at the auction. After the auction, Helga was quick to point out that they still may be looking to buy and that "real estate is a game." If there's no opening bid, then there's no bidding war. The interested parties can offer whatever they want for the property. Supposedly, a secret buyer offered a price of $1.2 million before the auction and Annselm rejected it. Now, who knows what, if any, offer he'll come back with.

This dispute between the sisters, and this terrible white elephant sitting on Union Street, gets even more upsetting when you take into account that there is actually thousands upon thousands of dollars in liens on the house. So, if someone had bid on the property, apart from purchasing the house and paying all the closing fees, they would then have to pay off the money owed to the banks (it is a couple banks).

These sisters are battling over the house (their inheritance), going into immense debt, and dealing with the sad situation of inter-family squabbling. According to Helga, the two sisters should own the house in equal shares 50-50, but that Annselm thinks that the division is 37.5% for Helga, 37.5% for Annselm and 25% for the Savant Garde Institute (which Annselm created). The Supreme Court decided that the Savant Garde Institute does not have any claim on the house, and so Annselm has taken that 25% for herself, leaving her with the majority share of the house. But seeing as Annselm is trying to have someone buyout Helga's half, it seems like she knows very well, that they are even owners of the property, even if she argues that Helga actually has no claim to the land, that she could simply get 50% of the money made if the property was ever sold. Annselm claims Helga doesn't have the right to sell it though.

What made last week's auction even more awkward, was that after Steven Grossman, the auctioneer, did his best to coax $1.1 million out of some lucky onlooker, Annselm stepped up and offered the kind bystanders a chance to buy a 50% share in the house for $800,000. She wanted to buyout Helga. Again there were no takers.

In a letter following the auction in an attempt to ease the fact that she is $200,000 in debt, Helga wrote, "I'm putting my share up for sale at a discounted price of $475,000. The 25% share my sister gave on behalf to the bogus Savant Garde Institute and then took back for herself will, most likely, be held in escrow

Rescued Horses on a Farm in Bridgehampton Join the Party

By Renée Donlon

I returned to the Hamptons after a few days in the city where even the streets of the Village three days before Halloween did not hold a sight as delightfully odd as the one waiting back East: a barn full of horses in costume.

This wonderfully bizarre view of masked, caped, and winged horses was all part of Amaryllis Farm Equine Rescue's (AFER) Horse Rescue Harvest Festival, which took place last Sunday in Sagaponack. The Festival serves as a benefit for the non-profit organization that saves horses from all across the country, and last weekend, saving horses came in the form of face painting, pony rides, games, snacks, and costumes. All these activities helped raise money for the organization, but the event that raised the most eyebrows, cameras, and corners of smiles was the showcase of horses in their Halloween costumes. There was a scarecrow mare, a four-hoofed court jester, and a hay chewing Indian princess. In the back stall, a small white horse wore purple curlers in her mane to match her purple horse blanket turned housecoat. This mommy horse in her "mommy" costume shared her stall and domestic costume theme with her foal. The horse baby was dressed as a human "baby" ready for its bedtime bath. The foal pulled off the look with a shower cap over its tall ears and a teddy bear that magically stayed balanced on his back as he moved about the stall. Call it innate equine grace, or call it a Halloween miracle.

Or maybe it is something more than that. Maybe the reason the horses, animals which have a reputation for being spooked by everything down to wind, were so calm under stuffed bears and flapping fairy wings was because of the nurturing atmosphere of the AFER's barn. Providing a safe haven for horses that would otherwise have died in slaughterhouses has become a quest for AFER founder, Christine Barret-Distefano. Barret-Distefano has worked with horses since the

IN COURT: DO THE SHINNECOCKS OWN THIS LAND?

By Victoria L. Cooper

October 10th marked the start of the second part of the federal trial between the State of New York, and the Town of Southampton against the Shinnecock Indian Nation. The trial debates the use of the 79-acre parcel of land known as Westwood in Hampton Bays. At the heart of the issue is the question of whether or not the Shinnecock Indian Nation owns this piece of land and, if they own it, is it a part of the reservation? If it were to be determined to be a part of the reservation, this decision could pave the way for the tribe to become a federally recognized sovereign nation able to build a casino on the East End.

The trial is taking place in the U.S. District Court in Central Islip, and has been sparking many local debates and conversations about how having a full-fledged gaming casino would impact eastern Long Island. It is important to note that although the tribe has been recognized by New York State for over 200 years, U.S. District Judge Thomas C. Platt ruled that the Shinnecock Indian Nation could be a defendant as a tribe because they were in possesion of property in Southampton in the 1600s when the first settlers came to Southampton. This does not mean, however, that the Bureau of Indian Affairs is going to necessarily grant federal recognition to the tribe.

The focus in the trial now is on Westwood. On October 24th historian James Patrick Lynch, who has been called the "Indian Killer" by The Boston Globe told the court that Shinnecock leaders had released ownership of Westwood by selling it to two different settlers. He stated the "Shinnecocks have not continiously exercised occupation or continued use of the land since 1640." The following day, lawyer Christopher Lunding of Manhattan, who rep-age of eight when her equestrian enthusiasm finally pushed her parents to drive her to the barn where she began her education in all things equine. After years of show circuits that Barret-Distefano found too commercial, it was ultimately the loss of a beloved horse that drove her to embark on her current mission to save as many others as she could.

These horses often make it as close to death as the feedlots when Barret-Distefano catches up with them. She arranges for the AFER to pay the horse's ransom, which is a price higher than the horse's "kill price." The kill price is what the horse is worth to the slaughterhouse, and is figured in pounds, as the horse's meat will be sold as food in foreign markets. Kill prices range between $500 and $600, but can climb as high as $1,000 for a larger animal. Because the ransom must be higher than the kill price, coming up with the money is a never-ending challenge for AFER. That is why the adoption fee for every horse that the AFER finds a home for gets used to pay the ransom on other horses. It is also why the AFER eagerly encourages donations (go to www.forrascal.com for more information) and adoptions.

However, it takes time before a horse is fit to be adopted. Glancing through a binder of photos and histories of all the horses the AFER has taken in, one can see the poor state of health in which many of the horses arrive at the farm. Not all are old. Many are fine horses that have simply suffered from poor nutrition and abuse. The before-and-after pictures show how well these horses can recuperate given the proper care. For example, Ginger the thoroughbred mare is all bones and matted hair in her before photo. The opposite page, however, shows a photo taken only three months later in which Ginger's coat gleams over a full, healthy form. A few more months later, she stands in her scarecrow costume, contently watching kids eat pumpkin cookies from her stall window.

Despite her tireless efforts, Barret-Distefano refuses to take all the credit for restoring the horses' calmness and happiness. She believes that the horses at AFER must somehow tell the new arrivals that it is a place where they are finally safe. So safe that they can graze in bunny ears for Halloween without any worries. In fact, the horse Ferdinand seemed so at ease in his rabbit ears that he spent a good ten minutes showing them off before my camera. It takes a horse that is secure in his masculinity-and, thanks to AFER, his environment, to do that.

East End Pilots Still Being Held in Brazil Awaiting Developments

By Sabrina C. Mashburn

On September 29th, the worst accident in Brazilian flight history occurred three weeks ago when a Boeing 737-800 owned by Brazilian commercial airline Gol Linhas Aeréas Inteligéntes crashed into the rainforest, killing all 154 people on board. The same day, an Embraer Legacy 600 piloted by Joseph Lepore, 42, of Bay Shore and Jan Paladino, 34, of Westhampton, employees of the Ronkonkoma-based plane-charter company ExelAir, made an emergency landing due to damage on its left winglet and horizontal stabilizer. The NTSB preliminary report of the events states that a crash between the two was probable, though the passengers and pilots of the Legacy expressed doubt that they could have survived a crash with a commercial jet, and they reported feeling no more than a "jolt" before making an emergency landing.

The Brazilian Air Force, who is in charge of the investigation, concluded that the Legacy clipped the wing of the Boeing mid-flight, damaging it and causing the crash. No further official statements have been released about the investigation, as the Brazilian Air Force's investigatory policy bans the release of details about an investigation until a resolution has been made, which could take many months.

The Brazilian prosecutor investigating the crash, Adriano Alves, suggested that the pilots of the Legacy had turned off their transponder so as to move from their assigned altitude of 38,000 feet to the same altitude of the Boeing in order to get better fuel burn-off. This comment was likely sparked by statements from the Brazilian Airspace Control Center, which accused the two American pilots of not switching frequencies when they flew into another air-traffic control center's jurisdiction. The BACC claims that this failure to change frequencies resulted in the plane's making itself invisible to both the commercial jet and air-traffic control. One possible explanation for the

CONTROVERSIAL SCULPTURE GARDEN OPENS HERE

Pablo Picasso once was quoted as saying, "Sculpture is the art of intelligence." And along that line of thought the Town of East Hampton purchased five acres of land from painter and sculptor Sasson Stoffer last year on Town Lane in Amagansett. Mr. Stoffer is of Iraqi decent and resides in both Amagansett and Manhattan. He had purchased the land twenty years ago in 1986. Part of the sale of the land supported by an inexpensive price was that the artist's works were to stay on the property, which include about 30 of his works, some quite large.

Councilwoman Debra Foster supported the purchase at the time, reportedly saying that young and old hikers alike would be getting, "a little art appreciation," as they hiked by. During the discussions proceeding the purchase, some local artists complained of town land being purchased for one artist exclusively.

Now the issue is that the land has been cleared of vegetation and exposes the breadth and girth of Mr. Stoffer's works. Last year, using public money from the Community Preservation Fund, the Town purchased the land for just over one million dollars.

Recently Councilwoman Foster championed a cleanup of the property in order to bring the land back to the state it was in when it was an open field as part of the Roy Lester horse farm. Action was ordered to be taken to clear out thick vegetation of various invasive plants, vines and some black pines that were growing within the sculptures themselves.

The talents of Bob Rogers, the director of the Town Recreation and Parks Department were utilized to clear the land to resemble some old photographs of the property. His men thoroughly cleared out the menacing growth and left the desired holly bushes and one large beech tree. The men used a brush hog machine and eventually a wood chipper was brought in to complete the clean up.

The end result has brought Mr. Stoffer's sculptures front and center in an almost naked and overly visible way. While examining the site for this article, a jogger who wished to remain unnamed said, "They should have planted more stuff to hide it more." What is not clear is why Mr. Rogers and Councilwoman Foster decided to act and spend money to clear the acres. Was it his or her intention all along or did someone, perhaps the artist himself, ask to have the land cleared to make his work more easily visible? Both Mr. Rogers and Ms. Foster were unable to be reached to answer this question.

Now that the field is as clear as the open field of the Roy Lester days, the almost thirty large sculptures are more easily seen. The dramatic effect is un-avoidable. Driving down Town Lane passing the acreage one will notice the great job Mr. Rogers and his crew have done giving everyone perfect sight lines to Mr. Sasson Stoffer's sculptures. It is still open to interpretation whether " a little art appreciation" is the first thing that comes to mind. However since sculpture is "the art of intelligence" perhaps there is a lesson to be learned. A new visit may be warranted.

Legacy's disappearing act may lie in the fact that its Honeywell-brand transponder has been recalled in recent months by the Federal Aviation Administration due to the fact that some units had stopped broadcasting unexpectedly. Since the Legacy's transponder has been reported as working normally before and after the accident, a faulty transponder may be the key to unraveling the mystery.

If the pilots did turn off their transponder in order to change their altitude illegally, they could face charges of manslaughter. Brazilian Police investigator, Luciano Inácio de Silva, has stated that although the pilots testified that they were flying at 37,000 feet per their flight plan, the flight plan had actually called for them to be flying at 38,000 feet at that point. If the investigator's statement proves to be true, the pilots could be held at fault for deviating from their flight plan whether or not their plane's transponder malfunctioned.

However, recent statements made by Brazilian air traffic controllers place the blame not on the American pilots, but on the controllers with whom they were communicating before the crash. According to an anonymous air traffic controller, it is air traffic control's responsibility to recognize when a plane disappears from radar, and move all other aircraft laterally to prevent a collision. As the lead attorney for the American Pilots stated, the pilots were "following established aviation procedures in attempting to re-establish radio communication" with the air-traffic control. International aviation rules mandate that when a plane loses radio communication with air-traffic control, it must maintain the last altitude it was cleared for before losing contact with air-traffic control, even if that altitude deviates from the altitude given on their flight plan.

One Brazilian air-traffic controller cites language barriers as the reason for the crash, although English is the internationally recognized language of air traffic control, Brazilian controllers are often not able to communicate in English. The same controller also noted that Brazilian controllers are responsible for up to fifteen planes at a time, therefore making it even more difficult for them to keep track of specific information concerning each and every plane under their surveillance.

Currently, the pilots are being detained in Brazil for questioning.

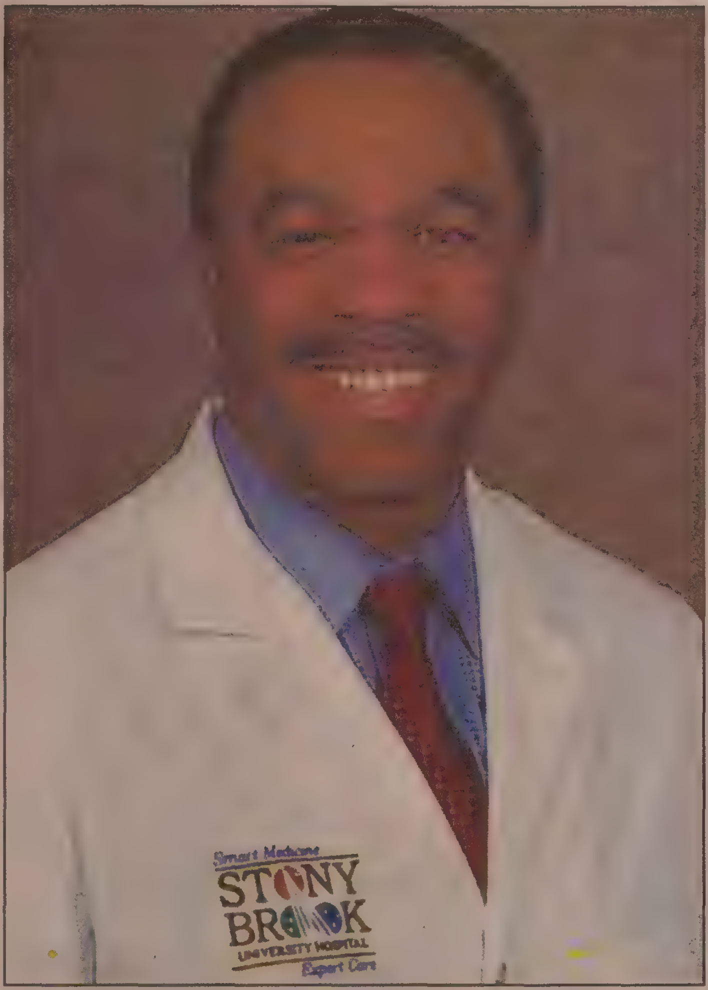
Who's Here



Martin Karpeh

Physician

By Joan Zandell

Martin S. Karpeh, has a calming voice and kind sensibility. When he is not putting people at ease by his mere presence, Dr. Karpeh is the Director of Stony Brook University Cancer Center and Chief of the Surgical Oncology Service in the Department of Surgery. Born and raised in Philadelphia, he had planned to return to start his practice in his hometown, when he was offered a fellowship at the world's foremost cancer center, Sloan Kettering in NYC.

And the rest, as they say, is history.

Dr. Karpeh's story begins in Philadelphia, as the oldest of three siblings and the only son, brought up by a powerful single mother who was "very regimented." According to Dr. Karpeh, "She was very organized, she was a pharmacist, and she put us (the children) above everything. Her name is Marion Cooper, and I owe my success to her and the way she raised us. Just to give you an idea about the type of woman she is, she waited twenty years to marry her boyfriend. She waited until we all were grown.

"We didn't really notice it," said the doctor, "growing up without a Dad. The Boy Scout leader played a role in my growing up, as did my pediatrician, who my mother held up as an example. My father was a physician and my mother always spoke highly of him. My father was from Liberia, West Africa and he chose to stay there. He was a Gynecologist/Obstetrician who was very well known in Monrovia. When you are the only Obstetrician in town...well, everybody knows you. We've been in touch since I graduated medical school."

Dr. Karpeh believes that environment plays a tremendous role in how one turns out. "I was looking at old photos and realized that we grew up in a fairly integrated area. The image out there is that you come from a family with closed or limited exposure and background, well many times, those circumstances make you less likely to reach out and accept other people. You focus on people like yourself and stay more closed. But the neighborhood was multi-ethnic and interracial and molded my view of the world.

"When I was old enough to go to high school, in those days you had to be recommended by your principal. I wanted to go to Central High, and he wouldn't recommend me. I was devastated. I ended up going to Churchfarm Boarding School in Payola, Pa. The school was attended by the boys of single parents and orphans and was sponsored by the Episcopal Church. When it came time to apply to college, I applied to all the traditional African American Schools, but I really wanted to go to Penn, and so I applied and was accepted. It changed my life. My opportunities were much broader as a result. It was a combination of things really that gave me the confidence to try; my mother telling me I could do it, and being comfortable in a racially mixed environment. People underestimate the role that environment plays."

I ended up going to Churchfarm Boarding School in Payola, Pa. The school was attended by the boys of single parents and orphans and was sponsored by the Episcopal Church.

Dr. Karpeh's two younger sisters owe their achievements to the same organized upbringing as their older brother. One sister is an attorney in the Radio division at ABC-TV and the other is an attorney in Cleveland, Ohio where she clerks for a judge.

One day, during his internship in 1983 after Dr. Karpeh graduated from medical school, he looked up and fell in love. "We met in the recovery room where she was a nurse," says the doctor with a chuckle. "She had a bubbly personality and a wonderful smile, she was just irresistible! We were married in 1985 and have three children. Quinn, the eldest son is a sophomore at Fordham University, daughter Chelsea is a senior at Ward Melville High School and Ashley is in the ninth grade at Gelenias high School in Setauket."

By the time Dr. Karpeh arrived at Stony Brook University Hospital, the surgical oncology program position had been vacated for 18 months. "The timing was good, because I wanted to integrate surgery with other conventional disciplines. We are also learning more about alternative therapies. It's hard to make recommendations because conventional medicine comes from a structured background and there isn't a great deal of testing available so it's difficult to recommend. Everyone thought vitamin E was a great lung cancer protectant. After testing its efficacy, we discovered the opposite was true, that the vitamin E group ended up with a higher rate of lung cancer, that vitamins A and E can be toxic in large doses.

"Surgeons in oncology need to work with other professionals. I was able to recruit others who thought that way. There are now 11 teams at Stony Brook, and each team is focused on another type of cancer. Focusing on a disease allows you to focus on subtleties that generalists miss. The challenge was developing the focus for each team. Now, breast and lung radiologists, for example, meet with clinicians to discuss specific cases.

"I owe it all to my mother and wife and their stable presence in my life. I have done a lot of traveling in my life, and have put in a lot of hours. We have a nice family as a result of my wife putting her career aside to raise our children. And we spent a great deal of that time in New York City where the first word out of anyone's mouth is what do you do? And rearing children is not recognized as a valuable pastime.

"My advice to young people, and it sounds so corny to say it, is to follow your dream. If you have a desire, do it. The other part of that equation is that nothing comes easy. You are only limited by yourself, but if you work hard, it's worth it in the end and you'll appreciate it more if you've worked hard for it."

Dr. Karpeh will be the keynote speaker at the CancerCare of the Hamptons conference titled Conversations about Cancer: A Dialogue in the African American Community. Bridgehampton Unified School, Saturday, November 4, 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Call 516-740-8629.

Incidentally, Dr. Veligdan's connection with ECI, which has now changed its name to Amacore, is more than that he is just a director. He is the largest stockholder.

There are some other interesting aspects to this case. On reading the complaint, you learn that Ms. Lancaster, in addition to investing $5,000 with ECI, alleges she gave him an additional $10,000, as Veligdan courted her, promised to marry her and then, after receiving the money from her, broke off his relationship with her and then failed to return the $10,000.

Rocky Aoki also writes, in his claim, that when he went to Dr. Veligdan, he asked him to cap his two front teeth. Dr. Veligdan then put him under anesthesia, and capped ALL of Rocky Aoki's teeth. When Aoki woke up, Dr. Veligdan gave him a bill for $20,000.

Petra Mielke, the interior designer, claims that after she filed her lawsuit against Dr. Veligdan, he offered a defense and issued a demand that she come to New York from Germany so his lawyers could take a deposition from her. When she came, the lawyers stood her up. They never appeared. So she flew back home.

Dr. Bob, for his part, launched a counter-attack against his former girlfriend, Mia Lancaster. He claimed in court papers that by her actions in suing him she caused him to lose some of his patients, most notably Rocky Aoki and Nicola Bulgari with whom she had been friends for a long time. The counter attack actually came before a Judge who asked Dr. Veligdan to produce any witnesses or evidence to support his charge. He not only failed to do so, he withdrew his claim and subsequently defaulted on a conference hearing.

Well, I don't know. What can I say? It's the Hamptons. And the matter is still in the courts.

Did you know that two years ago, Benihana Restaurants survived a long, four year civil battle with the family of a patron who ate there and subsequently died?

The man was sitting with his family at the table while the chef sliced and diced the various shrimps and chicken bits, then flipped them up in the air on his blade and then back down to the table. At one point, a piece of shrimp went awry and went flying over the table past this man's head, which made him flinch, causing him, as was said later after they finished dinner and all went home, to hurt his neck.

Days later, he died. The family said that the flinch had strained a muscle in his neck, which caused a headache, which caused a stroke and then death. They wanted Benihana to pay.

The judge mercifully threw it out of court. •

TWENTYSOMETHING. . . By DAVID LION RATTINER

The Saw III Diet

There is a new, mainstream movie out right now that is the most disturbing, filthy, and outrageously disgusting movie I have ever seen. If you plan on taking your twelve-year-old bro to go see Saw III because you took him to see Saw I and II and are trying to be a cool older brother, think again. Now I'm not an advocate for telling teenagers what they can and can't see. I snuck into R-rated movies all of the time when I was a kid. But this movie is so unbelievably horrific that I seriously haven't been able to enjoy eating food because of it.

I don't get the horror genre at all. Like I can't grasp what people like about these movies other then the hilarity of some of the concepts. There is nothing funny about this movie, let me tell ya. What is attractive about watching a dude's arm being completely twisted off in a giant machine? Just reading what I just wrote should make you go, "All right that's nasty."

But the theater was packed, which got me thinking that maybe there is something wrong with me for not being able to deal with such violent images for two hours.

Now I want the reader to know that I am totally a fan of Saw I and I even liked Saw II. I also thought Hostel was a wimpy horror movie and I laugh when I watch the movie The Ring, or Nightmare On Elm Street. I think those movies are fun to watch.

But this movie Saw III is just a complete bloodbath and completely boundary-less. It is on a totally different level then even your seriously scary horror flick. It is really just more gut wrenching then anything else.

When I left the movie theater in Southampton, I tried to shake it off by renting Disney's The Incredibles (great movie by the way) but Saw III stayed with me the next day at breakfast. I was sitting down eating a bagel with cream cheese and tomato and I simply was unable to eat. I eat this breakfast almost every day, but today I couldn't and it was because I couldn't get the torture scenes (which is basically the whole movie) out of my mind. I was still grossed out.

And then it hit me.

I could make a million bucks by starting a fab-diet called the horror diet. It's the easiest diet you'll ever go through because it's impossible to fail at it. All you have to do is watch this movie Saw III and go about your day. Trust me, you won't want to eat anything after seeing this movie. The horror diet would have a book filled with recipes that contain a lot of tomatoes to ensure that you are constantly grossed out by food.

Okay, I'm done with this.

By the way, if you haven't seen the movie The Departed, go see that movie, it's insanely awesome and is also an incredibly good story, plus Hamptons super-icon-radical-guy Alec Baldwin is in it. I always get a kick out of seeing Alec Baldwin in a movie. He's the man on so many levels.

All right, I still need to rant about Saw III.

This movie makes me feel old. I can tell that I am getting old, which is really just so depressing. The fact that all I could think about was not wanting my sixteen-year-old sister to see this movie and that I couldn't stop thinking about what kids are seeing these days was really depressing me. I genuinely cared about this kind of thing. Who the hell am I to think that? I never used to think about this stuff. If I heard somebody complaining about violence on television I'd be like, man, these people need to start thinking about issues that actually matter. But here I am, complaining about too much violence in the movies. I can handle it, but a teenager, what are you crazy? You want the world to turn into an army of masochistic, gun wielding, machete head-chopper-offer thirteen-year-olds?

Yep, definitely getting old...my back hurts.

Black "Fire Opal" Pendant Lamp – $1,800

Swirling, kinetic spectral colors that Donovan Design believes are the closest visual duplication to the light of an actual "black fire opal" gemstone. The effect is achieved by layering three different 'state of the art' materials-assembled in a very unique manner. As you move around the lamp, the spectrum of colors in the surface actually shift and undulate in three dimensions. Shown, an 18" diameter x 12" tall shade and may be ordered in any size up to 24" tall x any diameter. The outer shade is also available as a white Moiré. 20 Years Ago In Dan's Papers

The Penny Collection Confrontation

October 8, 1986

By Dan Rattiner

Several years ago, Raymond E. Nelson of Bloomfield, Michigan, decided to save every single penny that crossed his hands. If a grocery store clerk gave him change consisting of two quarters, a dime and four pennies, he would put the two quarters and the dime in one pocket, and he would put the four pennies in another pocket.

"I save pennies for my daughter's education," he would tell grocery clerks. "I keep them in sacks in the basement. You'd be surprised how they add up."

Many of the residents of Bloomfield, Michigan, admired Mr. Nelson for his economy. Not the least important were three thieves who met one night in a small downtown café.

"I'll bet old Mr. Nelson has quite a bit of money saved up in those pennies of his," the fattest thief said.

"Really?" the tallest thief said.

"He's been saving for years. He must have a couple thousand bucks at least. And he keeps them right on the floor in his basement. I've seen them. Sacks and sacks of them. All we have to do is jimmy the basement window."

On the next dark night, the three thieves, wearing wool ski masks to disguise their identities, backed a maroon Chevrolet with the trunk open right across the lawn and up to old Mr. Nelson's basement window. They got out of the car, jimmied the window and climbed into the basement to meet Mr. Nelson who was just coming down the basement stairs.

"Don't make a move, Mr. Nelson," the fat thief said, shining a flashlight in Mr. Nelson's eyes, "we've come to steal your pennies."

"You can't do that!" Mr. Nelson said.

"Why not?"

The thieves sat Mr. Nelson down gently in a dusty wicker chair and tied his hands behind his back.

"There must be fifty sacks of pennies here," the fat thief said, shining his light across the sacks by the basement wall. "Let's get moving. I'll keep the old man covered."

Each of the other two thieves grabbed a sack.

"ACK," said one, barely sliding the sack.

"UNK," said the other. "The sack must weigh a hundred pounds. We can't manage them alone."

"Then work together," the fat thief said.

"Each sack weighs a hundred and twenty-five pounds," volunteered Mr. Nelson.

But the two thieves, working together and grunting a great deal, managed to stagger the pending legal judgment. If my sister wants to get her own 12.5% share of the 25% share that she shifted around she could give me back my 12.5% and the escrow will be lifted. If that happens and the person who buys my 37.5% share wants to purchase the additional 12.5% later that too could be an option." But who would willingly enter into a legal conundrum like this, let alone pay almost half a million dollars for this kind of headache?

I could see the joy in Annselm's face when this stoop auction farce came to a close. But the seriousness remains. Eventually something is going to happen, whether the house sells, or the house falls down, or someone dies and leaves their percentage to charity, we surely haven't seen the last of the Morpurgo sisters. Though Helga claims that Annselm has exhausted the courts with five years of frivolous claims, neither of the two women seems to be letting up. Speaking to the two of them, only minutes apart, was like speaking to two complete strangers, who both feel that they are in the right, but have completely different stories. I don't know how else to say it, they both seem to be living in alternate realities. It's rather a desperate situation. Until I see court documents, I don't really know whom to trust.

Regardless of what side you believe, the auction on the steps of the municipal building was a fiasco. They should sell tickets and do it every Friday. It's a great way to meet up with friends — I did — and who knows, if they did enough shows, maybe one day they could make enough money to not have to sell the house.

Court

resents the Shinnecocks, tried to diminish the "ethno"- historian's testimony saying that the nation had given the use of Westwood to two settlers in the 1600s as "fire money," as repayment for a time the Shinnecock tribe particpated in an act of arson on settler's homes in this area. Lunding produced documents in the court which showed the nation had lived on and near Westwood years after the supposed sale.

The history of the parcel, which is located west of the Shinnecock Canal, and bisected by Sunrise Highway, is unclear, but the members of the tribe believe that it should receive the same status as their Shinnecock Hills reservation. In 2001, the Shinnecock began clearing the land in Hampton Bays on which they first said they were going to build a small gaming hall, without first seeking federal recognition. The work was halted by a court injunction, and here we are today.

At the trial, things have been getting heated inside the courtroom and U.S. District Judge Platt allowed Mr. Lynch's testimony on behalf of the State of New York and the Town of Southampton but threatened to throw him out of the courtroom on two occasions if he continued to inject legal opinion on the historical documentation and deeds provided in court. During his cross-examination, Christopher Lunding produced two maps, one from the 1920s and another from 1936, which showed Indian incampments at the area known as Westwood.

Tribal Trustee Lance Gumbs explained in court that he has been unable to find out how much money the Town of Southampton and the State of New York are spending in tax dollars on this "losing battle." Lance believes that the Town is trying to "re-write history" by attempting to disprove the historical fact that the Shinnecock posses rightful ownership of the land. Indeed, a report written in 2005 by Southampton historian Henry Moeller defined and outlined 3 Indian Meeting Houses on this land. This report met with an e-mail from Mr. Lynch who allegedly attempted to supress the fact that the tribe ever existed on that side of the canal.

Judge Platt has undergone a minor medical procedure and the trial will most likely pick up on Thursday if not the beginning of next week after he recovers. Upcoming testimony will come from a land surveyor concerning an 18th century land division at Canoe Place. The trial is keeping its 2-4 day a week pace and all memebers hope for a speedy and fair decision.

first of the bags of pennies up through the basement window and out to the lawn.

"You help with the next sack," the tallest thief said, puffing, as he climbed back through the window. He came over and grabbed the flashlight from the fat thief. "I'll watch the old man."

"Maybe we can all work together," said the fat thief. He turned to Mr. Nelson. "Will you try to escape if we leave you by yourself?" he asked.

"I certainly will," Mr. Nelson replied, jutting his jaw.

"Well, in that case, we'll have to work in shifts."

And that's what they did. For two hours the three thieves worked, one watching Mr. Nelson, and two clearing sack after sack out of the basement and up through the window to the waiting car. They had cleared about half the sacks along the wall in the basement, and they were complaining bitterly about their woolen ski masks, which, soaked full of perspi-

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY - Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages. Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find.

The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

ration, itched.

"You should have worn nylons over your faces," Mr. Nelson said.

"You're damn right," the tallest thief said.

"I think you should know," Mr. Nelson continued, "there are another fifty-five sacks in the furnace room. I'm sure you'd find them anyway."

"Oh no," said the fattest thief. "Listen, let's take what we've got and just get out of here. I'm bushed."

"We've only got about twenty-five sacks," said the tallest thief. "How much is that in dollars?" he asked Mr. Nelson.

"About five thousand dollars."

"That means there's another fifteen thousand dollars to go," the tall thief said. "We can't just leave that here."

"No, you're right," the fat thief said, breathing a deep sigh. "Five thousand split three ways is peanuts."

The three thieves, with Mr. Nelson tied to his chair, worked in the basement for six more hours. They filled up their getaway car with sacks, went and got two more getaway cars and filled them up too. And finally, at about four thirty in the morning, exhausted, they carried out the last sack. The three cars were laden with more than nine thousand pounds of pennies.

"I didn't think we could do it," whispered the fattest thief, leaning against one of Mr. Nelson's basement worktables. "Mr. Nelson, that's one hell of a lot of pennies."

"Let's get out of here," said the tallest thief.

And they did.

The three men each hauled themselves through the window one last time, straining and sweating, and slowly made their way out to their getaway cars.

Five minutes later, Mr. Nelson broke free from his bonds, ran upstairs and called the police. The police captured the thieves within a half hour. Two of them were caught as they tried to fix tires that had blown out, and the third one was captured when the rear axle of his car buckled and broke in half. Pennies were scattered all over the road.

"I told them they couldn't do it," Mr. Nelson told a newspaper reporter that morning. •

Three new members, Jimmy Buffett, Hugh Prestwood and Jim Weatherly, entered the Nashville Songwriters Hall of Fame on October 22. Buffet is famous for penning and performing "Margaritaville," and Weatherly for "Midnight Train to Georgia." Prestwood, a Grammy-nominee and long-time resident of Greenport on the North Fork, was discovered in 1978 by Judy Collins, who gave him his first hit, "Hard Times For Lovers," and subsequently recorded five more of his songs. Upon receiving his award Buffett commented, "I never got in it to become big and rich, but what the hell, it happened." Prestwood, on the other hand, was literally speechless. "I was totally shocked, delighted and honored," he said. Prestwood is married to Suffolk Times staff photographer Judy Ahrens.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

The Sheltered Islander #422

"Judge ye not..."

If you're thin, don't bother reading this column, just keep turning the pages till you hit some wine tasting section because you're not going to understand any of this. Today's column is just for those of us who battle the bulge.

Okay, gang, here we are again. Facing the holidaze. We just spent a lot of money at IGA to give away candy and get the same candy back. How dumb are we?

Now, what to do with the candy? We can't throw it out because that would be wasteful. But if we keep it, it will call to us all day ... "Stop vacuuming... come to me... come to me..." I can hear a Snickers bar call me through six feet of concrete. I mean, it's just a minibar... three Weight Watcher points. How bad could it be? We begin to rationalize... "I could eat five minibars and still have enough points for a skinless chicken breast and a huge salad."

Oscar Wilde said, "The best way to dissipate temptation is to give in to it." That logic works perfectly this time of year. My trick is to limit the temptation. Throw out the second tier candy now. We all know the first tier is all the chocolate candies, then there's the second tier stuff, Sweet Tarts, DumDums, and such. We only eat that because we're out of the other. So, toss out the second tier stuff as soon as you can. The first tier candies only last a week at most. That leaves two weeks of sensible eating before Thanksgiving strikes. If you don't throw out the second tier candies now, the candy will last till Thanksgiving.

Do your best till Thanksgiving and then just relax and enjoy the day. Try to eat your Thanksgiving dinner with other heavy people instead of family members. That way you can eat in peace without your family monitoring every morsel you put on your plate. What kills the joy of a feast faster than a relative pointing out that you'd save 16 calories with butter sprinkles instead of butter? And don't you love the way they say it — like you didn't know that? It always puts us on the defensive, which moves them into attack mode. They launch into a lecture of whatever they did for four whole days that allowed them to shake off five pounds. Then they say the stupidest thing, "You know, five pounds to me is like fifty pounds to you." That's like equating a stolen kiss to a rape. Thin people are as cruel as they are clueless. We know the difference between five and fifty pounds, two pants sizes. Fat does not mean stupid.

Another plus of dining with other heavy people is you can have dessert without feeling eyes on you from all corners of the room. If you dine with relatives, you can only have one slice of pie. It has to be pumpkin, because everyone knows that's the lowest calorie pie and therefore you are allowed one criticism-free slice. Then you get to watch everyone else enjoy the pecan pie, fruitcake, and rum balls. I have an Aunt I haven't seen in years. I avoid her because she feels perfectly comfortable demanding to know my clothing sizes. She, who has always been thin, eats more in one sitting than I do in a whole day. That seems to be the case with most thin people. Just once, I'd love to sit on one of them and squash them, as a kind of perverted poetic justice. Well... it's the thought that counts...

Do your level best between Thanksgiving and Christmas. Then enjoy Christmas dinner guilt free if you can. Thin people usually give us a break on Christmas day, but only if they get to say, "Don't worry, you can start dieting after New Year's." So we take the one-day pass and surprisingly to those who watch us, we don't really eat more than anyone else does. It just stays on us longer and piles up. My goal isn't to lose any weight over the holidaze, my goal is not to gain more. If I can just hold the line till January, I will consider it a successful holiday.

So, my dear fellow weebles (weebles wobble but we don't fall down), do your best and don't feel bad if you have to body slam a skinny person now and then. It provides us an emotional release and might keep us from emotional eating — which is what the skinnies warn us against anyway...

There Were Two Pilots, Now No Pilots

Military Contractor Will Build Drone Aircraft Where F-14s Were Once Made

· By TJ Clemente

Years ago, the thunderous sounds of F-14 Tomcats could be heard all over the skies of the North Fork. The famous Long Island-built fighter plane was tested and perfected and then modified to perfection. All of this too place out here on the North Fork. Many would look and watch these planes fly through the clouds practicing tricky maneuvers over the skies of Calverton.

In what is now called the Calverton Enterprise Park (EPCAL), Grumman Corporation was one of Long Island's largest employers, having, at its height, 3,000 workers just at the Calverton site alone. The Grumman Corporation was responsible for the F-14 Tomcat and the lunar module. It was a sad day, back in 1995 when Grumman, due to loss of military contracts, was forced to shut the doors of its Calverton site. After Grumman left the North Fork, the U.S. Defense Department, which owned the Calverton site, turned the site over to the town of Riverhead for a dollar. The town of Riverhead then sold major sections of the site to developer Jan Burman where it has been under close observation as to what exactly should be done with it.

Well it looks now that the military is going to be back on Long Island. American Dynamics Corporation, a New Jersey corporation headed by Stephan Amraly is now leasing property at the site in order to work on its unmanned weapons.

American Dynamics Corporation builds unmanned planes (drones) and is hoping to land large military contracts from the Department of Defense. The success of unmanned aircraft in war, both in Afghanistan, Iraq, and the rest of the world has been significant. Therefore, American Dynamics Corporation is very hopeful that the 30 jobs that they have listed for the site now may very well increase.

Since the drones use a great deal of top-secret technology, the company has requested early take-off and landing permission from the town. Testifying at a town meeting, Mr. Amraly reportedly said, "We're a defense contractor and we have plans to expand." If the facility's physical structures are to be improved or expanded, town approval will be needed. The excitement of the project brings back memories of the F-14 Tomcats and their sweeping wings which were used as the fighter planes Tom Cruise flew in the movie Top Gun.

With its sweep wings, the F-14 was the first fighter designed to accommodate all of the military's armed branches, the Air Force, Army, Marines, and Navy. It went into operation in 1972 and revolutionized fighter jets using onboard computers for navigation and weapons. It was such a complicated for its time that it took two pilots in order for it to fly. Many of the Grumman fighters were made in the Calverton facility by its 3,000 workers.

Riverhead Community Developer Andrea Lohneiss was told by Mr. Amraly the 30 present jobs at the site could and should grow if larger contracts are awarded. The present jobs range from bookkeepers to aeronautical engineers. In the near future, one may look up into the skies of the North Fork and once again see North Fork built planes. This time however, these planes will be unmanned drones using the latest technology, buzzing with quiet engines.

The return of a new, vibrant defense contractor, such as Mr. Stephan Amraly's American Dynamics Corporation is a welcome addition for employment growth in the area.

North Fork Winter Training

The North Fork Could Do The Mets And Yankees Some Good

By Phyllis Lombardi

Put your glove away for another day. Let winter take its place in your heart. That's kind of how I'm feeling now that baseball season's over. Sure, I had a bit of New York pride and hope in the Mets, but those Metropolitans faded. And though they are not my team, I faced disappointment – and winter.

I wonder if there's such a thing as winter training. Like spring training. Sorry. This baseball thing is hard to shake. But like old Mel used to say, "How about that?"

How about a few weeks in November and December when we could all get in shape for the cold months ahead? Maybe practice swinging a snow shovel instead of a bat for an hour or two a day. Or perfect our slide so icy driveways pose no problem. I think we're on to something here. Could the North Fork become to winter what the south and west mean to baseball? Could we become the country's winter training site?

Let's take an inventory of what we have. I just know that on the North Fork at this very moment, there are businesses, groups, and individuals getting ready for old man winter. If we presented their combined efforts, we'd have a winter training program second to none. And we'd put Tampa, St. Petersburg, Phoenix and all those other sissy spring training sites, off the map.

Here goes. I spoke first with Eastern Long Island Hospital's CEO, Paul Connor III. He and his staff are preparing enthusiastically for winter. Early November sees the ELIH flu-shot program in full swing. North Forker's sleeves are rolled up and they hear those words. "This will pinch a little." Pinch it does. But they're brave and they won't be sneezing their way through January.

Paul expressed gratitude to the many North Forkers who have four-wheel drive vehicles and volunteer to pick up ELIH staff members when drifts are deep. It's off to work, courtesy of generous East Enders.

Snow removal plans for this winter have been put in place, Paul said. Access to the hospital is crucial, of course. Paul, by the way, spoke with me at 6:30 a.m. as he lifted weights at ELIH Physical Therapy and Fitness in Southold. This is part of his daily routine. It's how he stays lean and mean and healthy. Looks like he appreciates the North Fork as a winter training site.

Also looking to stay healthy through the winter are the 75 or so dogs and cats cared for at the Southold Town Animal Shelter on Peconic Lane in Peconic. Just ask Bethany Clark, kennel manager, about preparation for winter at the shelter. She'll tell you they stockpile blankets, sheets and towels – all donations of those items are so welcome. Folks with snow blowers, even hand-shovelers, are at the ready.

If you've not visited the shelter, stop by. You'll see how much area must be cleared when a snowstorm hits. If you bring a little rock salt donation when your visit – great! Maybe you'll come away with a puppy or kitten you couldn't resist adopting. The very best cure for winter woes!

For some, the cure for those woes may be a glass of North Fork wine at the winter training table. Greenport's Jane Utz, who works at Pugliese Vineyards in Cutchogue, dispels the notion that folks who own vineyards just rest on their grapes during winter. Not so. Pruning is a winter job as is cleaning and storing barrels. The actual wine-making is winter work.

Jane adds that Pat Pugliese hand-paints the wine bottles during winter while Pat's daughter, Domenica, creates all those spectacular wine gift baskets.

Workers stay in good winter shape at North Fork nurseries, too. June's roses have disappeared but repairs on greenhouses? Winter's work. Harriet Tuthill of Trimble's of Corchaug described her early winter work at the Cutchogue nursery. Harriet says she "bumps 'em up." That sounded, if not illegal, then abusive, and I told her so. She laughed. Bumping up is transplanting perennials in small 6-inch pots to larger pots. Hundreds, sometimes thousands of them. Harriet's training is tough, for sure.

Finally, think of all the winter training at Riverhead and Southold police stations, our hardware stores, the highway departments, our senior centers, our schools. I submit the North Fork is as well prepared for winter as any team is prepared for the baseball season. And the odds are the North Fork will finish the season a heck of a lot better than did those let-us-down Yanks and Mets.

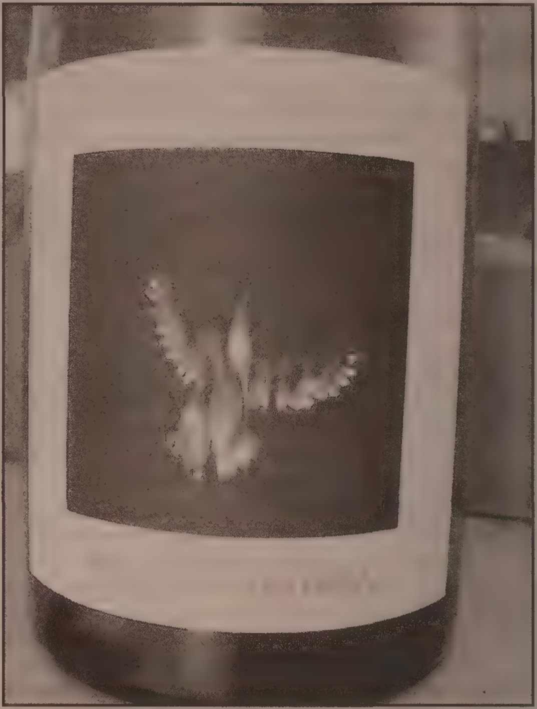
A Gallery Well Worth Visiting

I consider myself somewhat sophisticated and cultured, but a trip to an art gallery — and just an art gallery — isn't necessarily my cup of tea (or glass of wine.) I need a fine meal either before the gallery or after (or maybe both) to entice me. The way to a man's heart is through his stomach, right?

But, there's a new Gallery on the North Fork that I'm willing to visit — and open — any time. In fact, I plan to several times over the course of the next few months.

Bedell Cellars has just released the newest of its art-inspired wines, the 2005 Bedell Gallery ($45). The press kit lauds this wine as "further evidence that Bedell is perfecting the art of wine." A bold statement, but not as boastful as it might seem.

This complex, richly textured white is a blend of 52 percent chardonnay, 32 percent sauvignon blanc and 16 percent viognier — a unique blend for the North Fork or most anywhere else for that matter. Five separate lots of chardonnay were barrel fermented in French oak with primarily native yeast, then blended with viognier and sauvignon blanc. I tend to like Bedell's chardonnays and used to love founding winemaker Kip Bedell's varietal Viognier bottling, so this blend was intriguing even before I popped the cork.



Pale straw yellow in the glass, the aromas immediately rise up from the glass — before swirling even begins — with lemons, vanilla bean, toasty marshmallow and oak, minerals and subtle baking spice come together in a layered-yet-fresh nose. The blend is absolutely seamless on the palate, with the three varieties coming together without any rough edges. The result is an elegant, well-balanced wine that is nimble on the palate but extremely flavorful. Citrus, vanilla and mineral flavors fill the mouth and just the right acidity brings balance and potential longevity. Balance is truly on display here.

In a wine world where so many emerging regions look to classic regions like Bordeaux and Burgundy for wines to model their own after, this wine stands alone as distinctively Long Island. The winemaking team at Bedell Cellars has used thoughtful blending to create an outstanding wine that fully displays, and I think explores, the potential for white wines on the North Fork.

Perfecting the art of wine? Maybe. But this wine is exciting because it shows off our region's terroir in a beautiful way — both the wine and the label, which was designed by globally renowned artist Ross Bleckner.

They only made 200 cases, so I doubt it will last long. Visit their tasting room or www.bedellcellars.com for more information and to order.

The Restaurant at Four Doors Down

Main Road
Mattituck
631-298-8311

THE RESTAURANT

Why Four Doors Down? Simple - the owners, Bob and Barbara Chiappetta owned the Mattituck Lanes for eleven years and when the property was redeveloped two years ago, they moved four doors down the road, from what is now a CVS store, to take over a restaurant that was in need of some TLC. There has been a restaurant on this site since the 30s under various names. (An old menu shows that in the 30s a burger was 10 cents!). Its main claim to fame was in the 60s when a group called the "Kingsmen" from Smithtown played here regularly before they became famous with their hit song "Louie Louie." The exterior is still quite simple, but the interior is something very different. The warm, charmingly decorated dining room, redesigned by Barbara, is well segregated from the very popular bar and is much more spacious than you would expect from the outside. In fact, the two restaurant sections can seat around 100 diners with the rear seating 70, and can be closed off for private functions.

Chef Tom Seibert was renowned for his German cooking at the Gasthaus and here he offers an eclectic blend of German, Italian and Traditional American fare. Bob and Tom are revamping and improving the appetizer offerings, but we always like baked clams and calamari, which are on the current menu, so that is what we started with. The clams were tasty without being too aggressive and the local calamari was really tender and delicate and hardly needed any of the accompanying dipping sauce. Next we tasted the soup of the day, a split pea based soup that had a delicious velvety texture and was full of rich deep lingering tastes.

On a night when the elements made it clear that the chills of fall are well upon us, we decided to concentrate on the German section of the menu for our main dishes. Sauerbraten is one of Stella's all time favorites and Tom prepared a dish that really melted in the mouth. It came with homemade potato dumplings that were feather light and the braised red cabbage with its deep long lasting taste was a perfect complement. Veal hunter style comprised two generous cutlets of tender veal cooked with shallots and mushrooms in a rich burgundy wine sauce. With this dish came some truly excellent mashed potatoes. Both of these dishes were top class in their composition and execution and made us wish that we had room even to taste some of the Italian specialties that all sounded very appetizing but they will have to wait till our next visit.

The traditional items include ribs and a meatloaf that Bob told us has acquired a great reputation and following from regular patrons. Indeed this is a restaurant where the focus is very much on repeat clientele and as a result, it is open for lunch and dinner, seven days a week, year round.

When it came to dessert time, it had to be apple strudel and again we were not disappointed. The strudel pastry was thin and light and the filling generous with tasty apples and fragranced with cinnamon. I should have had that a la mode, but even without ice cream the dish was amazing.

Bob and Barbara's philosophy is to provide very good quality, well-cooked food at realistic prices that encourage the repeat diner and the spur of the moment eating decision. Certainly with appetizers from $5 to $10; main courses that come with a choice of soup or salad and vegetables from $14 to $23 and desserts only $5, they have achieved their goals. When you add in the fact that you can drink a very acceptable, good sized glass of wine for between $4 and $6 and bottles start at $14, this really is a place where a family can come and not feel that they have to take out a second mortgage to eat well -- they also have a 'Kid's menu'. We didn't try one, but we understand that they mix a mean martini that carries a full seven ounces of spirits, so handle that one with care (just kidding). Music is also becoming a regular feature on weekends.

We were very impressed with what Bob, Barbara and Tom have accomplished here. Based on our experience the food is good, honest and well cooked, using top quality ingredients. The surroundings and staff are warm and welcoming. I can still savor in my taste memory the dishes we ate on this visit and we have certainly put it on our list of places to return to as casual diners and not reviewers.

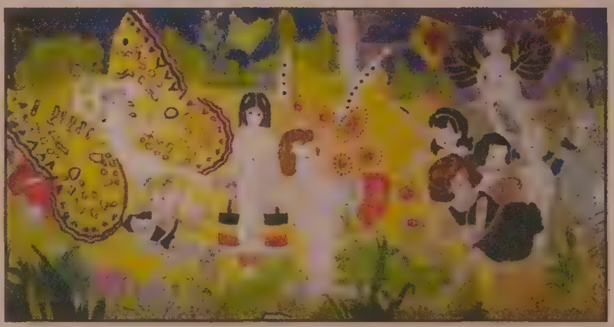
When In Manhattan...

BY OLIVER PETERSON



In January of 2004, I wrote a column about the annual Outsider Art Fair at the Puck building in downtown Manhattan. In that article, I focused heavily on the most well-known and sought-after outsider artist, Henry Darger. About 10 years ago, I saw a show of his work at the Folk Art Museum. His striking paintings and the story behind them, have stayed with me ever since. It could be argued that Darger single-handedly put outsider art on the map. "Outsider Art" has been used to identify various types of work over the years. French artist Jean Dubuffet coined the term "Art Brut" (translated as "Rough Art"), to describe work made outside the standard boundaries of the art world; but the later English translation, "Outsider Art," attempts to be more specific. The phrase ended up covering a broader base with many interpretations. It often includes self-taught, mentally or physically handicapped, or "Naïve" artists, with little or no contact with the established art world; but Outsider Art, in its truest sense, is about intrinsic motivation. Intrinsic motivation describes the engagement in an activity for its own sake, with no external incentive. In discussing art, this would mean that the artist creates work without goals of breaking into galleries, selling, or showing in any format. This motivation can be driven by enjoyment, or by some kind of obligatory obsession. Henry Darger became an icon of Outsider Art not only because of his uniquely beautiful work, but because he was exemplary of this intrinsic motivation. While I don't doubt he enjoyed what he did, the sheer volume and consistency of work shows a deep, unrelenting obsession.

The Darger story carries all the requisite elements needed to win the title of "Outsider." He was born in Chicago in 1892, and after his mother's death Darger was eventually placed into the Lincoln Asylum for Feeble-Minded Children. At age 17, he ran away and went on to live a lonely and solitary life. Darger worked as a janitor in a Chicago hospital from around 1922 until his retirement in 1963. He was a devout Catholic and went to mass daily. It was at this time he began to create the prolific body of work we know today. He shared it with no one. Darger worked alone in his room, barely scraping by on Social Security, and developed his intricate fantasy world. His Magnum Opus was a book of over 15,000 single-spaced, typewritten pages and the hundreds of drawings and paintings that coupled it. The Story of the Vivian Girls, in what is known as the Realms of the Unreal, of the Glandeco-Angelininian War Storm, Caused by the Child Slave Rebellion-now simply called In the Realms of the Unreal, told the epic tale of the Vivian Girls from Abbiennia and their allies, legions of pre-pubescent girls, battling for their lives against the vicious Glandelinians. The Glandelinians, depicted as men in various uniforms inspired by the Civil War and other historic conflicts, sought to torture, kill, and exploit the girls in gruesome and horrific ways. It's not uncommon for Darger to show us the disemboweled, crucified, hanged, and mutilated young girls–casualties in their fight for freedom from enslavement. In the Realms of the Unreal is regarded as one of the "20th Century's most original and unusual literary works."

Only after Darger's death in 1973 was the fruit of his talent fully discovered. Nathan Lerner, Darger's landlord, discovered the work when the artist was sent to a nursing home shortly before his death. After Darger died, Lerner spent much of his time and attention to collecting and disseminating the art and related materials. It has since garnered acclaim and demand with international exhibitions, multiple publications, a film, and films currently in the works.

New York is lucky to once again be host to an expansive new exhibit of Darger's work. Exclusive representative to the Darger Estate, the Andrew Edlin Gallery's "Henry Darger: The Vivian Girls Emerge" is on view from November 2 through December 23. The exhibition features many significant works that have not previously been shown. The work goes from gory and disturbing, to quite beautiful, and gives further insight into the artist's creative process. This show is guaranteed to have an impact on you and is a wonderful introduction into the world of true Outsider Art.

AEG is located at 529 West 20th Street, 6th Floor. Call (212) 206-9723 or visit EdlingGallery.com for more.

CLASSIC CARS

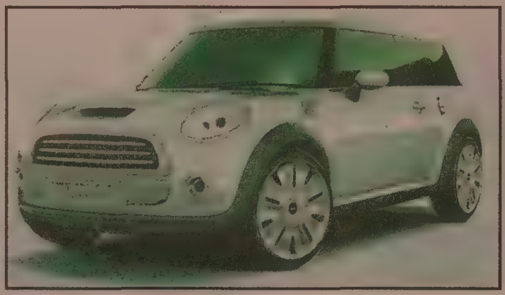
WITH BOB GELBER

For the last several years I've been writing articles trying to convince American drivers that they should consider converting to smaller cars, mainly because I feel that we need to end our dependence on foreign oil. New York Times has jumped on the bandwagon, too. Several weeks ago, on October 25, they published a special car section called "Small Car Nation." The headline read, "Subcompacts Are Hot Again, And the Selection Is Growing." There were many well-written articles in the thirty-five-page supplement, but one article caught my eye, and frankly, made me see red.

It was an article on small car safety vs. large car safety. Basically, throughout the article, it stated that small cars are less safe than large cars if they hit one another. I've stated many times that if a small car gets into a massive accident with, say a large heavy SUV, the large car will fare better. Remember those old print ads for Charles Atlas, where the muscular bully on the beach kicks sand in the face of the skinny weakling? Well, it's basically the same thing.

But, and it's a big but, small cars are less prone to getting into an accident in the first place, because they are inherently safer due to the fact that, in most cases, they have superior handling and braking power.

What also got my pistons popping about this article is that a lot of the quotes were from the Insurance Institute. Now I don't know much about these guys, but just their name implies that they are probably funded by insurance companies. You know, all your good ol' buddies out there whose good hands you are in. Let me tell you about your benevolent friends. They are the ones who forced all manufacturers to include energy absorbing front and rear bumpers on cars, falsely believing these improvements would save the insurance companies a few bucks and possibly save lives. Those energy-absorbing bumpers didn't help matters in any way. Instead they turned a $200 fender bender into a $2,000 repair, and also added about $500 to the cost of every new car. It was also an insurance company that was embarrassingly caught giving free radar detectors to police departments across the country. Not to save lives, as they claimed, but to make it easier to raise your insurance rates if you got a speeding ticket. They were also behind the ridiculously low 55 mph speed limits that were imposed on many of America's superhighways for many years. Believe me, it was not to save gas or to save lives, but simply a ploy to raise your insurance rates if you got points on your license. And to their disgrace, it was the insurance companies of America that trumped up virtually every reason they could create not to pay claims to the poor homeowners in New Orleans who suffered through Hurricane Katrina. If you think I'm down on insurance companies, you bet I am. How many people do you know who are afraid to make even a small claim, home or auto, because they are scared their rates will go up, or worse, they will be dropped? What other business can get away with this crap?



(Mini Cooper)

The point of this tirade is that in the Times article, the Insurance Institute implies that small cars are not safe. Well, don't believe them. Their hidden agenda is probably the fact that if cars were indeed smaller, there would most likely be more of them on the road and, probably, people would be able to afford to drive more often. More often means, at least to the insurance nerds, more fender benders. Gas economy in America could actually cost the insurance companies more in insurance claims.

What is wrong with cars today is not the automobiles themselves; they are all pretty darn good, large and small. It's the drivers. It starts with driver training. Frankly, it stinks. The driver's test consists of a few blocks of slow speed driving with the emphasis on signaling and stop signs. The big test is parallel parking. If you can't parallel park, you fail your test. That's absurd. No one ever got killed trying to park a car. Drivers today should be taught how to get out of a skid on a wet road. They should be taught how to make a high-speed emergency stop. They should be taught how best to avoid an accident. They should be educated on the things that can kill them. High speed, sloppy driving, bad decisions, all of these lead you to the land of hurt. Teach them, and test the applicants with that in mind. Make the driving tests harder, have a skid pad where the road is wet, on a faster track, and weed out the idiots before putting them on the road. Only this will save lives. Insurance companies don't want to save lives, they want to save money.

One more thing. When I was a contributing automotive editor to Newsday, my boss at the paper always referred to the New York Times as the best newspaper in the world. I agree; but next time they do a section on small cars, maybe they should use writers who know more about automobiles.

Bob Gelber, an automotive journalist living in the Hamptons, appears regularly on television as an automotive expert. You can email him at bobgelber@aol.com.

JUST FOR KIDS

EAST END KID:
KIDVILLE AND LUCKY 13

BY EMILY HART POST

With a little help from Katlean de Monchy and David Post

KIDVILLE

The kids at KIDVILLE are growing, but not as fast as the club itself. We went to an outdoor party for the Rushmore condos on the West Side, which will have a Kidville, and we hear there are going to be more clubs coming. I had so much fun at the party – I watched a show where a lady hooped 25 hula-hoops at one time. Then we played some games and I won some stuff. Then I went to the petting zoo part and made a goat my best friend by feeding him and playing with him. I saw some clowns from the Big Apple Circus and they did tricks for me and made me laugh. And best of all, I saw my friend Jordan who I know from the Hamptons and from my old school.

LUCKY 13

Lucky 13 was the 13th Annual Family Day party at the American Museum of Natural History, one of my favorite places to visit.

It was great fun for the kids, including me. We could play with live animals, dig for dinosaur fossils, do some cool science stuff, meet Joe from "Blues Clues" and other kids. My best subject are animals and science and I loved learning new stuff at AMNH.

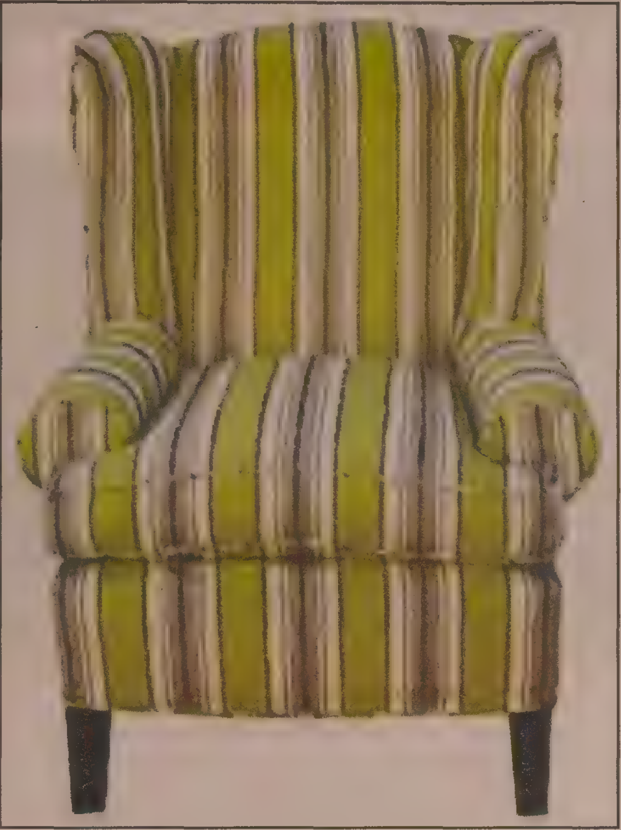
Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello



Rum Runner East Hampton, Southampton

Oh boy, the fall is flying by and the leaves are coming down like the first snow of winter. The shops are gearing up for the upcoming holiday season and the stores are already filled with holiday magic. It seems to me that the seasons are just blending into one another and there is no in-between – one day there is patio furniture on the floor and the next day, Halloween. Thanksgiving and Christmas merchandise has replaced the look of summer. Let's do some shopping!

The Hampton Coffee Company, all locations, has joined in this transition and is celebrating the new season with "the flavors of fall" from now throughout Thanksgiving. The cafés are featuring two new autumn favorites, Pumpkin Spice Latte and Pumpkin Spice White Mocha. Baked on premise are the pumpkin muffins, hot apple cider and freshly roasted pumpkin spice coffee. Don't forget to visit their newest location on Mill Road at the Bridgehampton National Bank in the Six Corners Roundabout in Westhampton. Stop in and have a brew.

It would not be holiday time without stopping into Bar Boy on West Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays to pick up your service equipment and supplies for the holidays. There is a "Thanksgiving Fall Special" in progress on chafing dishes, polished stainless (from $43.50 and up), jumbo Cardinal red wine glasses that are gift boxed for $20, cake, spring and loaf pans, restaurant-quality white bone plates ($36 per dozen), kitchen and food processors, and of course, plenty of holiday inspired paper goods at very affordable prices. Get going, before you know it, it will be sitting on your holiday table.

Breezin Up on Jobs Lane in Southampton is having a fall sale going on right now. You will be surprised what you can pick up here and put aside for your winter getaways.

Twist on Jobs Lane in Southampton is also having a "fall sale" with lots of good savings on their woman's and girl's selected merchandise. The new inventory will be arriving any day, so get this sale under your belt.

Chico's on Jobs Lane in Southampton is having a "fall clearance sale" with lots to choose from including ladies clothing, accessories and great costume jewelry. You can certainly do some Christmas shopping here with plenty of stocking stuffers readily available.

Rags on Jobs Lane in Southampton is also having a "fall sale" on selected merchandise and accessories.

On Hampton Road in Southampton at the Little Frame Shoppe, look for reductions of up to 50% off on select merchandise. The shop is filled with unique and unusual home furnishings and accessories and if you are looking for those cutesy signs for your garden or kitchen, this is the place that you will find plenty of them. I love this shop; there are so many different little hostess gifts to choose from.

At Rum Runner, on Main Street in Southampton and East Hampton, you will find a "warehouse sale and floor model sale" on home and garden furnishings and accessories. Looking for that farmhouse table with chairs? They have them at this shop.

English Country Antiques on North Sea Road in Southampton is having a "fall sale" with 30% off everything in the store just in time for re-doing for the holidays. This store is filled with home furnishings and accessories galore. The Bridgehampton store, on Snake Hollow Road is offering 20% off sale on dining chairs, lighting, linens and framed prints, while the up to 30% off sale is on selected furniture.

In Eastport: Seatuck Stained Glass, 490 Montauk Highway is having a "clearance sale" from now until December 1. All the imported panels and lamps will be marked down 25%, purchases of two or more get a 30% discount. In addition to a full line of stained glass and fusing supplies the shop also offers classes, expert repairs, and commission work as well as many gift items. The hand blown pumpkins are hot this month. You can call the shop at 631-325-0002 for hours, directions, or any other additional information.

At the Tanger Outlet in Riverhead: Just in time for the holidays at Zales Outlet The Diamond Store, there is a "customer appreciation sale," the more you spend the more you save. You will save an additional 5% to 15% off their already low prices that reflect 70% off on gold, diamonds, gemstones and fine watches. This event is happening on Friday and Saturday, November 4 and 5. And…if you mention this Shop 'til column, you will receive a third discount. How 'bout that! Zales is now carrying Polar Ice, which are certified stones that are mined and cut in the Northwest Territories of Canada. Call 631-298-3561 for an appointment or information.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Fall Shopping!

If you have any questions or comments, or your shop is having a sale, and you would like everyone to know about it, I would love to hear from you via e-mail at: shoptil@danspapers.com or via fax at 631-537-6755.

Eating Your Way Around Town

Who doesn't want to go to a dinner party? Who actually wants to host a dinner party? As fun as hosting an evening of food and friends can be, it can also be a stress on the host and hostess. There is a menu to plan and shop for, food to cook, a table to set, and perhaps most daunting of all, a house to clean.

So why not divide up the cleaning, the cooking, and all the other responsibilities between the guests? Make every guest a host by turning your dinner into a progressive dinner party. The basic idea behind a progressive dinner party is that each couple or person plays host for one course. The guests move between homes, enjoying a new course at each one.

Of course, this works best when all diners live close together, preferably in the same apartment building, development, or at least neighborhood. To avoid too much of the night being eaten up traveling between homes, allot about forty-five minutes per course and plan to serve no more than three or four courses.

Because each course will be somewhat time sensitive, choose dishes that you can prepare ahead of time and simply reheat when the party reaches your home. After all, you won't have those few frantic hours in your kitchen before your guest ring the doorbell that you would have at a regular dinner party, because you too will be coming from another course down the block.

You also will not have a span of a few hours at one location. This means no lazy after-dinner hours for sobering up from those pre-dinner cocktails, so be sure to plan your travel to and from homes accordingly. In spring or summer, a pleasant walk between host houses will be a welcome chance for digestion between courses. For a more lavish evening, have everyone chip in for a limo to shuttle guests from house to house in style. Imagine you are spending a night on the town going from restaurant, to lounge to club, instead of to the Smiths' to the Bakers' to the Jones'.

You could also imagine you are going from Italian restaurant, to Mexican cantina, to sushi bar by having each host prepare a course from a different country. If you have a particularly international group of friends, have each one make a dish unique to their culture.

You might also try one continuous theme that winds through all the courses. This is especially well suited for the holidays. Everyone wants to share, or at least show off, their favorite Christmas or Thanksgiving recipes, and they can when everyone is both a host and chef.

Yet, not everyone is born a chef. The progressive dinner party is very sensitive to culinary incompetence. Maybe you make a mean pot roast, but your flan is inedible; volunteer to host the main course and leave desert for one of you fellow hosts to look after. In this way, the progressive dinner party allows you to showcase your particular kitchen talents while not subjecting your guests to your culinary shortcomings.

A progressive dinner party can be more than a chance to show off your best chef skills. It can also be a way for organizations to welcome new members and to acquaint them with established members. The first course, such as cocktails and hors d'oeuvres, can take place at the organization's office building, outside bar or hall. Then, the guests can break into groups and proceed with their own progressive dinner parties. This plan enables new members to meet everybody at once and then to meet a few others later in a much more intimate setting.

Taste Of Tuscany

New York State has been a Mecca for Italian immigrants since the First World War, so it comes as no surprise that fresh, delicious ingredients are being imported from Italy all year long, which means that putting together a Tuscan-themed cocktail party is one of the most elegant ways to entertain, and is easy enough to throw together at a moment's notice, any night of the week.

One of the most appealing aspects of hosting a Tuscan party is that all of the food is served at room temperature, and therefore can be arranged minutes before the guest arrive, and left untouched for the duration of the evening.

Italian country culture, much like our own, centers on simple, healthy living, so very few concessions need be made for appearance's sake. The table, preferably a large, wooden one, may be covered with a simple cotton cloth, or left bare. Without a cloth, large plates can serve as drip-catchers for the smaller dishes. Candlelight will make your food look that much more inviting; just be sure to use the "dripless" kind to avoid any wax-on-food accidents.

The ingredients for a Tuscan cocktail party are simple: cured meats, hard and soft cheeses, fruits and fruit compotes, olives, fresh breads, and flavorful wines.

Traditional Italian Antipasto consists of meats such as hard and soft salamis, bresaola and prociutto, sliced paper-thin and arranged on clean, white plates. For a cool pairing, place small triangular wedges of cantaloupe on a platter with prociutto. Most of the other meats should be eaten solo, although translucently thin slices of hard cheeses, such as Asiago and Parmiggiano Reggiano, can be set alongside the bolder-tasting meats, such as bresaola and balami, for a tangy pairing.

Other cheeses should be placed on wooden boards and surrounded by small dishes of unsweetened fruit compotes for dolloping on top of the cheeses. Fresh fruits, such as peaches, apples and as many colors of grapes as you can find, can placed in baskets, presliced and arranged as garnish beside meat and cheese, or strewn across the table whole, acting as both side dish and décor.

Breads can also be placed directly on the table in the true Italian fashion, served in baskets or on cutting boards. Be sure to have an assortment of breads from which to choose, consisting of at least a classic sourdough and an herb-infused sourdough and a salted round. Pop the loaves into the oven ten minutes before the guests arrive so that they are warm and crisp. For even tastier bread, brush some olive oil on the tops of the loaves and sprinkle with salt just before warming.

Different imported, extra-virgin olive oils should be set out in bowls or ramekins, some with tiny olives in them, some with herbs and spices, and some with olio piccante. You can purchase pre-flavored oils, or, for a more economical and personal approach, stuff bunches of fresh herbs into bottles of olive oil and let the flavors permeate the oil for a few days. The most popular flavored oils are also the easiest to make; olio piccante is made by simply dropping whole, hot chili peppers (the same ones you grind up to put on top of pizza) in a bottle of good oil and waiting three days. Garlic and rosemary oil is made by stuffing whole sprigs of fresh rosemary and a few cloves of garlic into the oil. To release the flavor of the garlic more quickly, cut the cloves in half before you drop them in. Be sure to use oil imported from Italy, as extra-virgin oil is not held to the Italian standard of quality in any other country. Bottles of flavored oils also make beautiful centerpieces, and you can use them to decorate the table or send them home with your guests as party favors.

Olives come in every shape, size and color, and your Tuscan picnic should incorporate as many varieties as possible. Spicy Sicilian olives can usually be purchased pre-spiced, and are always a favorite at any gathering. Giant red and green olives are juicy and delicious, and lend a festive air to the table due to their rich colors and shiny, smooth skin and the tiny brown olives are perfect for garnishing your olive oil dishes.

Although a bottle of Chianti will add the final touch of authenticity to this picture, every winery on the East End produces at least one wine that will enhance the flavors of a Tuscan meal. Usually, a reputable wine shop or vineyard will be able to recommend the right bottle if you tell them which foods will be served.

Once your table is set, and the lights lowered, a little bit of Italian music and good conversation is all that is needed for a party that feels like it is taking place across the sea and back in time, on a hot summer night in Tuscany.

Dan's HOME Entertaining

Are You Ready For Some Football?

Baseball may be the great American pastime, but football is the sport that encourages its fans to behave at their most fanatical. Football parties have become a fall ritual, regardless of whether it's tailgating at the game or hosting some friends in front of the television and the bigger the screen, the better! Planning a home football party can be fairly simple, but there are several ideas you will want to incorporate to ensure your party is a success.

First, you will want to use a football yard sign to mark the party site. You can line your walkway with red shimmer stars, writing each team members' name on a star. Tape the stars with masking or duct tape to the sidewalk, walkway, or exterior walls leading to your front door. The stars can also be used on the food table and as place cards. A good idea is to attach a bouquet of helium-filled balloons to a light post or mailbox so there will be no mistaking where the fun will be taking place.

Decorate your party room with team colors and encourage your guests to decorate themselves. You can provide face paint and make sure you have some pom-poms around for people to shake. Your table should set the mood. Use tableware and napkins with your team shop, have team logo napkins or you can put out a colorful all-NFL ensemble. NFL beverage napkins, paper plates and cups all add to the festivities. Mylar sports balloons add a colorful touch and you can use them indoors or out. You should also have a football centerpiece, such as a 13-inch inflatable football. Hanging some football lights around the table or around the television is a nice touch also. Stand life-sized stand ups of sports heroes around the table or giant number standees to represent players. Football banners make a powerful statement. A huge 5' x 5' or 5' x 11' mural can be hung up with ease and will look great.

You will want to make sure your party room has plenty of chairs available so everyone can see the television. Move the furniture back and set up chairs bleacher style so that plenty of people can watch the game comfortably. If your group consists of pretty serious fans, staying in one room works best. However, if some of the group is more interested in socializing, you might want to prepare a second room for them. If you have a television in the basement you might want to put any kids in there. Even kids that are great fans have trouble staying focused for four quarters, so it's best to situate them where they won't interrupt your view of the action.

As far as food goes, it's best to set up your table in buffet style, since people will not want to sit for long in your dining room. Make sure you prepare all your food in advance, as you will not want to be stuck preparing food during the game or miss the last two minutes of the half. Potluck is always an acceptable way to go. Try a big pot of chili, some sausage and peppers, or maybe a pot of meatballs for sandwiches. Finger food is good as well as soup and sandwiches. Serving foods associated with a certain team's location is a nice idea (clam chowder for the New England Patriots or Philly cheese steak for the Philadelphia Eagles). Once the food is out, leave it out for the rest of the game. If you have a big crowd, not everyone will get to the table in 15 minutes, and many will come back for a second helping. And be sure to have a cooler or two, filled with beer and soft drinks.

Win or lose, the post-game is a good time for a ceremonial smashing of a piñata. It's a lot of fun if you have kids, and even more fun if a guest has had one too many libations. Smashing a football piñata is a great way to get rid of some frustration or to celebrate a victory. You could try filling the piñata with age appropriate items and treats. For adults, you may want to put in Maalox, Advil, etc. For kids, you could put in whistles, candy, football stickers, football trading cards, etc. There are also many football trivia games that can be played for the enjoyment of all. Just use your imagination and have fun!

Dan's A&E Guide

YOUR WEEKLY GUIDE TO FUN IN THE HAMPTONS

Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival 2006

Just when we all thought Hollywood had left the Hamptons, another film festival has appeared on our horizons. From November 4th until December 16th, the Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival will be lighting up the big screen at the Westhampton Performing Arts Center for its twentieth season, and you can see the films for free. The idea for the festival came to founder (and Dan's Papers Publisher and Editor in Chief) Dan Rattiner about ten years ago, when he realized that "Hollywood is starting to take notice of us." From congregating here to celebrate new films at the Hamptons International Film Festival, to dotting the beaches with movie cameras all summer long, filmmakers are using the Hamptons' beautiful vistas as frequently as they use Los Angeles's palm tree-lined boulevards and the busy streets of New York. Dan noticed the Hamptons' rising status as one of film's most sought-after locations, and says that he was inspired to begin the festival because "the area is so photogenic. There is a law in East Hampton town (I don't know if it's still a law) that you have to get a permit if you want to take a picture of anything in the town and use it for films or model shoots." Dan also thought that this would be "a good thing for the Chamber of Commerce." In the long run, promoting the Hamptons' beauty as a location for movies may bring more money to the community, but every screening at the festival, and wine and cheese reception that follows, is free. Each film is introduced by a film historian, critic, or judge and, in the past, those who have been in the films have been known to drop by occasionally and discuss their experiences with the audience.

Because every film in the festival was either shot in the Hamptons or made by people who live here, local viewers from all over the East End should be able to find their hometown in at least one of this year's six spectacular choices.

On Saturday, November 4th, Deathtrap, starring Michael Caine and Christopher Reeve, kicks off the festival on a mysterious note. Made in 1982, Deathtrap follows Sidney, an out of work playwright-turned-professor, on his quest to appropriate his student's play and sell it as his own. Although his plan to simply "rub out" his student seems foolproof, once the prey falls into the trap, the simple scheme develops more twists and turns than a rollercoaster, and nothing goes as planned.

Anne Bancroft, Carrie Fisher and Betty Comden star in Garbo Talks, the second film in the series, on November 11th. Plucky Estelle, played by the ravishing Anne Bancroft, is diagnosed with cancer, and decides that before she dies, she must meet her idol, Greta Garbo. Estelle's dutiful son decides that he will fulfill his mother's wish, and stakes out Garbo's apartment, delivering food in the hopes of a face-to-face meeting with the star, even if it means sacrificing his marriage in the process.

The most accurate portrait of the media ever made, Academy-Award-winning Network, starring Peter Finch and Faye Dunaway, serves as the festival's centerpiece on November 18th. Famous for the line "I'm mad as hell, and I'm not going to take it anymore," Network's protagonist, Howard Beale, is the personification of the pre-1970s news, when journalists uncovered stories instead of spinning them, and cared about getting the news to the people more than they cared about their ratings. His relationship with Diana Christensen (Faye Dunaway), herself a personification of the slick, heartless modern media, as well as the propensity of his network to lean towards Christensen's philosophies, drives him to make the ultimate sacrifice for his audience, in the end pleasing not only the audience, but the network as well. Although this film was considered a masterpiece when it was first released, the recent homage to Beale's famous speech on NBC's new show "Studio 60" proves that Network is perhaps even more relevant today than it was in 1976.

Rocket Gibraltar, Burt Lancaster's final film about an ailing Sagaponack patriarch, plays the following Saturday, December 2nd. In Rocket Gibraltar, Levi Rockwell (Lancaster) invites his children and grandchildren to celebrate his 77th birthday with him at his beachfront home. Although he loves them all, only his grandchildren understand him, and they try to make his birthday wish come true, despite their parents' constant feuding and personal struggles.

Jack Diane
Something's
Gotta Give
Keanu Reeves Frances McDormand Amanda Peet

Rob Lowe, Meg Tilly and Kim Cattrall star in the December 9th selection, 1988's Masquerade. A deliciously 80s story about lust, murder and money, Masquerade follows spoiled heiress Olivia (Tilly) from Southampton to Shelter Island during her illicit love affair with handsome, yacht-racing Captain Tim, played by a young, tanned and preternaturally perfect-looking Rob Lowe. Olivia's love affair, coupled with her intense hatred for her stepfather, lends this seductive thriller a classic 1980s air of debauchery and decadence.

The festival closes with Something's Gotta Give, starring Diane Keaton, Jack Nicholson, Amanda Peet and Keanu Reeves. Erica, a brilliant writer with the most stunning Hamptons home on film to date, is caught in an incestuous love triangle when she falls for her daughter's older boyfriend (Nicholson) and a handsome young doctor (Reeves). Although her daughter Marin (Peet) dumps her boyfriend early on, and review: butley...by gordin & christiano

Nathan Lane is giving what many will consider a dazzling performance as the title character in the troubled revival of Simon Gray's 1971 play, Butley that premiered back in 2003 at Boston's Huntington Theatre. Mr. Lane is undoubtedly one of the few bankable Broadway stars around today, and he appears to be the main reason for the re-staging of this rather dated study of a brilliant but self-loathing college professor.

With a reported three million dollars in advance ticket sales, it remains to be seen if the limited run will have the legs to be a bona fide hit and ultimately be extended. Still basking in the glow of his hilariously funny multi-award-winning performance as Max Bialystock in the immensely popular hit musical The Producers, the star turned last season's tired production of the Neil Simon classic The Odd Couple into another box office bonanza. Will lighting strike yet again? Will the public pay to watch Lane's impersonation of the hostile character that Alan Bates indelibly created on Broadway in 1972 with his Tony Award-winning portrayal? Much will depend on word of mouth, but New York's important critics will play a large part in shaping the response.

Essentially a character study of a self-absorbed professor, the action takes place in real time over the course of a single day and is set in the academic office (wonderfully rendered here with appropriate slovenliness by Alexander Dodge) that Butley shares with his younger protégé and live-in lover Joseph (Julian Ovenden). As the play unfolds, Butley learns not only that his estranged wife, Anne (Pamela Gray), wants a divorce so she may remarry, but that Joseph is leaving him as well, for a successful publisher (Darren Pettie). The drowning Butley, armed with cigarettes and a bottle of scotch, struggles in vain to ward off his mounting pain and to control the day's unraveling events with his lacerating wit.

The two-time Tony Award-winning Mr. Lane is a gifted comedian, who has turned in some searing dramatic work, most notably in Terrance McNally's Lisbon Traviata. His impressive performance here of the once-prominent scholar has the perfect English accent, but his Butley is little more than a mannered bag of his stock tricks; very accomplished, indeed, very funny with all the barbs landing beautifully and very angry, as well. So what's wrong? He may astound you, but he never gets to the insane alcoholic level necessary to breathe life into Butley. This isn't an honest characterization, but instead a beautifully polished surface. The actor has not dug deep enough to the core of the rotting spirit that drives Butley. Oh yes, there are times when he truly catches hold and can even be shocking like in the scene with his wife, where he suddenly turns nasty, but the performance doesn't add up. He plays the ending, but don't be fooled, he doesn't really get there.

Nathan Lane

Directed by Nicholas Martin, the evening has moments too, but rarely slows down and on the whole, nothing feels lived in or genuinely moving. The chemistry between Lane and his lover is nonexistent, and the bisexuality that was titillating in 1972 is equally numbed in 2006. Like Mr. Lane's very likable portrayal there is no underbelly, you see the mechanics, but the momentum is lacking so the events fail to accumulate to the playwrights devastating conclusion. The accomplished supporting cast, that includes Dana Ivey, Jessica Stone, and Roderick Hill, delivers beautifully articulated performances that are postured and often measured, displaying the appropriate qualities and little more. This is all done with smoke and mirrors. You will certainly hear the playwright's marvelous dialogue in the finely constructed play, and you will laugh, but don't be duped, it isn't real.

If you are looking for a show that confirms Nathan Lane's status as an elegant wit this staging by Mr. Martin may very well be worth the price of admission, but if, on the other hand, you desire to be moved by an emotionally involving drama, Butley will surely be a downer and possibly even a bore.

Butley opened on Broadway at the Booth Theatre, 222 West 45th Street between Broadway and Seventh Avenue on October 25 for a limited 14-week run that is scheduled to end January 14, 2007. For tickets, call 212-239-6200 or visit the box office.

FILMS

The Parrish Art Museum's Friday night movie is the Arabic thriller Paradise Now (2005) about two West Bank suicide bombers. The screening starts at 7 p.m. and tickets are $5 for members, $8 for guests (refreshments served.) On Saturday, the Parrish and the East End African-American Museum present a film festival at the Parrish. There are films appropriate for children 3 years of age on from 1:30 to 3 p.m. The classic film The Green Pastures will be shown at 3 p.m., Constellation (2005) at 5 p.m. and a short film, plus The Unseen (2005), at 7 p.m. Admission is $5 and refreshments will be served.

Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center's "World Cinema" feature this Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon is Quinceañera (USA, 2005), the moving story of a young Hispanic girl who finds herself pregnant just before her fifteenth birthday celebration. Tickets are $3-$10 at the door.

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre continues its "Picture Show" series with two classics this weekend. A Place in the Sun (Elizabeth Taylor, Montgomery Clift, Shelley Winters) is the Friday, 8 p.m., feature and From Here to Eternity (Burt Lancaster, Deborah Kerr, Frank Sinatra) is the Saturday, 8 p.m., movie (tickets $5 at the door). Sag Harbor's John Jermain library shows Mission Impossible III, starring Tom Cruise, on Friday at 6:30 p.m. There is no admission charge, but arrive a few minutes early for good seats.

The East Hampton Historical Society presents the new documentary about the Montauk Lighthouse, First Light, at the Marine Museum, Bluff Road, Amagansett, on Saturday at 2 p.m. Filmmaker Tom Garber will introduce his movie and a reception follows the screening (free admission).

Dan's Papers' "They Made the Movie Here" film is Garbo Talks starring Anne Bancroft and Ron Silver. Lee Davis hosts the 3 p.m. Saturday afternoon screening at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center (free admission).

SPEAKERS

Novelist Jennifer Egan and her novel The Keep are the focus of this Friday's authors' dinner presented at Alison's restaurant, Bridgehampton, by East End Books. Dinner, a signed copy of the book and a chance to hear and speak with Ms. Egan is $54. Call the restaurant at (631) 537-7100 for reservations.

T.J. Parsell will read from his new book Fish: A Memoir of a Boy in a Man's Prison on Saturday, 6 p.m., at Canio's Books, Upper Main St., Sag Harbor (free admission).

Cultural historian and author Dr. Mark Ciabattari concludes his two-part series on "Faith, Reason and Experience: Probing Belief in a Complex World" on Thursday, November 9, 7 p.m. at Southampton's Rogers Memorial Library. He will discuss Dr. Daniel Dennett's book Breaking the Spell: Religion as a Natural Phenomenon about challenging the existence of God. There is no admission charge but reservations are requested; call (631) 283-0774 ext. 523.

gives her mother the green light to go after him, love triangles are never easy and the audience won't know which man Erica chooses until the very last scene.

With so many different films to choose from, this year's Dan's Papers Film Festival promises to delight movie-goers of all ages. Best of all (besides it being free, of course) the festival is a biannual event, so if you are not in town for this one, mark your calendar for the next festival, which will begin this coming Spring. The Hamptons are all over the silver screen these days, but instead of having to scout out the best Hamptons films yourself, why not let Dan Rattiner pick them out for you, and then enjoy some wine and cheese with the stars- on Dan, of course.

Flags of Our Fathers

Atten'chun! I'm standing up and saluting Clint Eastwood for his brave WWII film Flags of Our Fathers, which does not simplistically aggrandize war as an act of bravery. If I had a naval fleet, I'd give him a 21-gun salute for not retiring at age 76 and instead, doing his best works, eclipsing directors who've conformed to high-budget, flash-in-the-pans who cater to box office receipts.

Flags tracks the tribulations besetting three of the men who helped raise the flag on Iwo Jima, immortalized by an iconic photo, during the battle for the island that lasted more than a month. It was the most deadly battle of that war; 6,821 Americans and more than 18,000 Japanese lost their lives. (The complete director, Mr. Eastwood, is preparing another Iwo Jima film for the Japanese, Letters from Iwo Jima, from their own fighters' viewpoints. It will be released next year.) As in its literary source, the film describes three narratives, the intensive combat for the eight square-mile island, and the preparation for that battle and the after-effects thereof on the three surviving flag-raisers, who are sent back to the States as poster boys for publicity stunts, presumably, to sell War Bonds and were used by every ambitious politician, corporate big-shot or just plain "celebrity" as accessible, media-friendly heroes. It did not take long for the "heroes" to feel uncomfortable (to say the least) in the midst of all the red, white and blue, glory-profiteering because they survived when so many of their comrades did not.

Eastwood's film, as adapted by William Broyles Jr. and Paul Haggis from the book by James Bradley (son of one of the three iconic figures who survived) and Ron Powers, has a complex structure from which Eastwood does not flinch. He doesn't contrive popular rah-rah-rah, easy flag-waving for thrilling cinematic climaxes. In Flags, war just rages, horrifically, it does not allow movie-going young men or women to conjure up dreams of glory. Comparisons to Saving Private Ryan, are a given. Steven Spielberg's brilliant movie virtuously presented, in opening scenes, a tremendously crushing picture of violence. However, having made its shocking cinematic statement, it slid too readily into the standard 40s and 50s war movie in color. Ironically, when Clint went to acquire film rights, Spielberg had gotten there first. They struck a deal, Spielberg would co-produce and Eastwood direct. Was there friction? I don't know. Eastwood has no doubt cut profits with his unstinting desire to let everyone know that there are no heroes. Each individual, forced to kill, only wanted to stay alive. And when they did, life became an indescribable hell, comparable only to their experience at war.

MAYOR ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Flags of our Fathers (+)

This film, directed by Clint Eastwood, tells the story of the U.S. Marines capturing the island of Iwo Jima from the Japanese during World War II. It was the first Japanese territory to be attacked by the U.S. in the Pacific and one of the costliest in terms of U.S. and enemy deaths. The battle lasted 40 days, although the flag was raised on day five.

Everyone living at the time (1945) remembers the photo of six Marines planting a U.S. flag on Mt. Suribachi, the highest point on the island. Later, that powerful picture became a symbol of the U.S. victory, and the unconditional surrender by the Japanese empire. A memorial erected outside Washington, D.C., near Arlington National Cemetery, based on that photo, symbolizes the contribution made by the Marines in the Pacific during World War II.

The film explains that the famous photo we saw was not the first hoisting of the flag, but rather the second; the first picture of the men who reached the mountaintop and hoisted the flag was taken by Staff Sergeant Louis Lowery. One of the men who planted the flag was misidentified, but that error was eventually corrected to the anguish of the mother who first lost her son and later found that he was not one of those who hoisted the flag. The second photo was taken by Joe Rosenthal of The Associated Press. Both flags are now in the custody of the U.S. Marine Corps.

Of the six heroes who planted the second flag, three survived and were sent to the U.S. to sell war bonds to help pay for the war. The three men were John Bradley, also known as Doc (Ryan Philippe), Rene Gagnon (Jesse Bradford) and Ira Hayes (Adam Beach). The story of Ira Hayes, an American Indian, is painful to watch as he descends into alcoholism after the war. The three actors do a superb job of reenacting the lives and torment of the Marines, fighting an enemy who believed it was cowardly to surrender and fought to their deaths, some committing suicide by hand grenade.

Flags of Our Fathers is truly a fine movie. It is the best I have seen on World War II (other than the television miniseries "Band of Brothers"). The huge number and variety of American warships assembled to shell the island and the storming of the beaches are realistically portrayed, as are the scenes of destruction and bloody deaths on both sides.

Movies on World War II, the Civil War and the Vietnam War will always hold American audiences enthralled, and someday that will hold true for the war in Iraq. This movie should be seen by everyone interested in an historic episode in World War II, and by everyone who is proud to be an American.

The history of the raising of the flag on Iwo Jima can be found at www.wikipedia.org, among other web sites.

MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS

Borat: Cultural Learnings of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazahkstan

Sacha Baron Cohen (of "Ali G" fame) returns with arguably his most broadly offensive satirical tool: Borat, a Kazahkstani talking head on report in the US. This is vicious and impressive comedy, allowing room for belly laughs as well as the more uncomfortable humor which comes from Cohen's skewering of the most absurd aspect of America.

Flushed Away

Just when you thought it was safe to go back in the cinema, after a summer awash with talking bears and dancing cows, bam! The return of CGI, just in time for Christmas. This actually isn't that bad fare, coming from the Aardman studios (those responsible for Wallace and Gromit etc.) and telling the story of a posh house mouse (voiced by Hugh Jackman) who finds himself flushed into the sewers.

The Santa Clause 3: The Escape Clause

It's that special time of year when cheap has-been comedians don their red and white pointed hats and take on the mantle of Santa in the futile hope of becoming the hero of children far and wide. Tim Allen is more persistent than most as shown in this, his third starring role in this flaccid series facing off against Martin Short's equally lame Jack Frost. Seasonal? Yes. Anything other than crass, heartless and exploitative? No.

Saw III

The best new horror franchise on the block rolls out its third installment and there's plenty on offer to turn stomachs and tingle spines. Once again the dementedly sadistic Jigsaw (Tobin Bell) is torturing the good people of America with their own morality. Properly frightening stuff.

Catch A Fire

More worthy drama from Australian director Philip Noyce. This tale of political rebellion in Apartheid-run South Africa carries its weight clumsily. Tim Robbins and Derek Luke play the chief activists and play them well, but there is something too leaden about Noyce's take on the situation to ever really inspire.

Running With Scissors

Based on Augusten Burroughs' best-selling comic memoir, this is quirky and interesting family fare with excellent performances all round. There's something wrong with the pacing of the narrative and this leads to an odd rhythm. That said, Annette Bening is phenomenal as Augusten's mother while Joseph Cross plays the boy himself with guts and glory.

Flags of Our Fathers

An ensemble period film based on the Allied (and largely American) victory at Iwo Jima in February, 1945. Clint Eastwood takes the helm with Steven Spielberg and Mystic River's Rob Lorenz lurking in the wings as producers. This has "Nominate-Me!" scrawled all over it, but the whole affair feels overly worthy and heavy-handed in the most lifeless of ways.

The Prestige

Christopher Nolan (of Memento fame) returns to form with this stunning, dark and brooding tale of competition and obsession in 19th century London. Hugh Jackman and Christian Bale are phenomenal as the dueling magicians at the center of the plot, and even celluloid-poison David Bowie can't sink this. A gorgeous triumph.

Guy

you think that you hear applause, and you do. The camera pulls back to reveal the scene staged at a rally in Chicago's Soldier Field. It is totally fake, except for three men, "Doc" Bradley (so perfect for Ryan Phillippe), Ira Hayes, a Native American (an especially affecting performance by Adam Beach) and Rene Gagnon, an enterprising sort who saw this as a passport to riches,(played by Jesse Bradford). Eastwood references the original photo, taken by AP photographer Joe Rosenthal (Ned Eisenberg), a great deal. President Roosevelt ordered the three back for a publicity tour in 1945. Whether they were the ideal choice for this duty was questionable. The tour took a heavy toll on the men, Hayes especially, who suffered from post-traumatic stress disorder and alcoholism, and Bradley, who steadfastly refused to talk about his experiences with anyone, not even his family.

The heavily edited, checker-board patterning allows for a saga-like sweep of action and emotion that gathers deep insight and a power packed punch that can leave you stunned, haunted and questioning.

Pay attention.

DEATHTRAP

Michael Caine and Christopher Reeve daringly star in a funny, scary shocker. A cat and mousegame that's as playful as a razor sharp battleaxe. Featured are an East Hampton windmill and, appropriately, the cemetery.

Saturday, November 18

GARBO TALKS

Sidney Lumet directs other celeb Hamptonites in a charming, poignant story. A dutiful son desperately tries to fulfill his mother's last wish to meet Greta Garbo. Anne Bancroft as the tough mom is so great! Their meeting in the closing scene, features the fab Betty Comden as Garbo. Darn, I gave away the ending.

Saturday, December 2

NETWORK

East Hampton's Sidney Lumet and writer Paddy Chayefsky's dead-on broadside aimed at television and unprincipled industries presaged today's headlines. A way-over-the-top entertainment, it won Oscars for Mr. Chayefesky, Peter Finch, Faye Dunaway and Beatrice Straight. You'll be shouting, "We aren't going to take it anymore!"

Saturday, December 9

ROCKET GIBRALTAR

Filmed entirely in golden Sagaponack, Burt Lancaster closes his career with his most sensitive performance as an ailing patriarch entertaining his large family on his 77th birthday. This small film celebrates life and family in a big way.

Saturday, December 16

MASQUERADE

Rob Lowe, Meg Tilley and Kim Catrall make a psychological drama extra suspenseful and risque with plot twists that will have you twisting in your hot seats. Southampton and Shelter Island are as pretty as its naked greed.

Saturday, December 23

SOMETHING'S GOTTA GIVE

Diane Keaton proves an "older" woman still has "it" while Jack Nicholson suffers a heart attack wooing her daughter. Jack's young doctor, Keanu Reeves, goes ga-ga over Diane. It's a very youthful take on the A.A.R.P. crowd, in the fountain of youth's Hamptons.

THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL 2006

DEATHTRAP

Saturday, November 4th at 3 p.m. at the Westhampton's Performing Arts Center on Main Street in Westhampton Beach, Dan's Papers' Free Movies Made Here Film Festival begins its presentation of locally spawned movies and what a catch this one is – a spectacular shocker that keeps you guessing until the closing credits. This week's film, Deathtrap, takes place in the stylish, urbane East Hampton Village where, in a cleverly designed Windmill house, a devastatingly devilish thriller plot is spun by Michael Caine and Christopher Reeve. It spins dizzyingly with smashing clever wit, maddening mayhem and a drop-dead murder puzzle. It's a comedy shocker, mixing up a magnificent mulligan stew of the unexpected, sliced and diced by more instruments of torture and death than were used in Saddam Hussein's recreation room.

Deathtrap writer Ira Levin's, flashy, clash and bash Broadway hit was adapted by Jay Presson Allen and directed by the formidable Sidney Lumet, who could shoot the required takes and walk home for lunch. The rest of the production unit are out of the "Who's Who in the Hamptons" producer, Alfred de Liagre, Jr., designer Tony Walton, special effects wizard, Brian Ferron, and lots more. Naturally, it is the stars who create the lightning flashes in this dark and stormy night killerdiller. The rascally fine actor, Michael Caine, is in perfect form as a once highly-successful mystery playwright, now with four successive flops, who would kill (literally) for a hit, when along comes Christopher Reeve with his first play that is so flawless, even a shoddy director couldn't ruin it. Also starring, terrifically, is East Hampton, always out there, sneaking around with its misty, glamourpuss charm.

MICHAEL CAINE • CHRISTOPHER REEVE • DYAN CANNON

The movie opens on Broadway, the curtain has come down on Caine's most recent flop. He gets Opening Night-plastered and on the milk train home, sleeps through to Montauk, and takes a $52 cab fare to his East Hampton home, which is built around a windmill. In his antiquey, country-charming house is his ailing, but still a loose, noisy cannon, wealthy wife (Dyan Cannon) to whom he reels off his litany of woes. But the worst blow is receiving an absolutely perfect play written by an ex-seminar student (Reeve). Though his wife has money, Caine wants the success as well as the three to four million dollars the play can earn, after all, his Hampton house is expensive.

In the house there is his massive collection of weapons, old and new: daggers, crossbows, maces, battle axes, etc. Some are real, some are stage props. What would you do if your house was furnished to the hilt with swords and stuff? Wouldn't you invite the novice out to give him the benefit of your expertise in murder mysteries? And, maybe do it with one of those blunt or very sharp objects?

This is just the start of a series of plots that go and turn around and go and stop and go around. It is bloody and fun and will also scare the pants off you. Complications and surprises seemingly never end and there's that Dutch psychic sleuth who foretells crimes before they happen who has rented the cottage next door, and oh, m'gosh, not far from there is East Hampton's picturesque cemetery by the pond. What plot devices has Caine secreted in a burial plot there? Oh, what a tangled web is woven!

The malevolent fun and games are free as are the refreshments served. Be there to help throw light on the murky movie business, along with host, show biz historian, Lee Davis. Any sharp objects must be checked at the door.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Whenever I visit one of my favorite fish markets, Cor-J Seafood in Hampton Bays, I will buy enough fish for a couple of days – the fish is always so very fresh. One of my choices on a recent purchase, for my second night's dinner, was local black sea bass – a small delicate fish. Well, best laid plans – I never got to cook the fish the second night. I decided to cook the fish the next morning and serve it at room temperature for the following evening – three days after I originally purchased it. Not wanting to warm the fish since it would overcook, I made a simple tomato sauce to serve warm with the room temperature fish. So there you have it – a terrific dish to make ahead and delectable enough to serve to company. According to my source this variety of sea bass should be available locally for a couple more weeks.

Though unrelated to black sea bass or black bass, striped bass has always been one of my favorites and will be available through Mid-December. Blackfish, a wonderfully sturdy fish is available in late spring, disappears a bit in the summer and returns in the fall. The fish can stand up to strong flavors and is often used for blackened fish. For the blackfish quickly sauté the fillets and finish in the oven while preparing a tasty sauce with leeks, ginger, and balsamic vinegar.

Before the next round of the rich and hearty fall holiday foods, it's a good idea to lighten up with a variety of our fresh, local fish. Being so close to the source can't be beat!

SAUTÉED BLACK SEA BASS FILLETS WITH HERB TOMATO SAUCE

The fillets can be prepared up to one day ahead, refrigerated in a suitable container, then served at room temperature with the warm tomato sauce.

Serves 4

1/2 cup panko bread crumbs
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/4 teaspoon paprika
4 6-ounce sea bass fillets, skin and bones removed
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2-3 tablespoons lemon juice
2-3 tablespoons snipped chives

For the tomato sauce

2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 large shallots, finely chopped
3-4 tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and diced
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/4 cup dry white wine
2 tablespoons chopped Italian flat-leaf parsley
2 tablespoons julienne of fresh basil

1. Place panko crumbs in a large plate and toss to mix with salt, pepper and paprika. Rinse the fillets and pat dry with paper towels. Coat both sides of the fillets with the crumbs.

2. Heat the oil in a large 10-12 inch skillet; sauté 2 fillets at a time, about 3 minutes on each side until golden. Transfer to a side dish. Sauté remaining fillets and place them side by side on a platter. Pour lemon juice into the drippings in the skillet, bring to the edge of a boil and pour over the fish. Sprinkle chives over each fillet. When fish is cool, cover with plastic wrap then securely wrap with foil, if doing ahead.

3. For the sauce, heat the oil in a saucepan and sauté the shallots about 2 minutes, stirring occasionally until tender. Add the diced tomatoes, salt and pepper to taste and the wine. Bring to the edge of a boil then simmer for 6-8 minutes, stirring occasionally. Adjust seasonings to taste as necessary, add 1 tablespoon of each herb and stir to mix. Sauce may be prepared hours ahead and reheated for serving. Spoon a puddle of sauce on 4 dinner plates, top each with the fish fillets. Sprinkle over remaining herbs and serve.

BLACKFISH WITH LEEK, GINGER AND BALSAMIC VINEGAR

Blackfish is sturdy enough to stand up to strong flavors.

Serves 4

2 skinless thick fillets of blackfish, about 3/4 pounds each
Flour, salt, pepper, and paprika
3 tablespoons canola oil
2 leek, trimmed, washed well and thinly sliced
2 tablespoons freshly grated ginger
2 tablespoons Vermouth
1 1/2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons chopped parsley or chives

1. Cut center bone from each fillet, rinse and pat dry with paper towel. Sprinkle with flour, salt, pepper, and paprika to lightly coat.

2. Heat 2 tablespoons oil in a large non-stick skillet and when hot but not smoking, put in the fillets, you will have to do this in two batches, and brown lightly about 3 minutes on each side.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

3. Heat remaining tablespoon oil in a clean skillet and sauté the leek over medium-low heat for 6-8 minutes and add the ginger. Sauté for 2-3 minutes longer and pour in the vermouth. Bring to a boil, add the vinegar, salt and pepper to taste and stir to mix. Keep warm.

4. Meanwhile, place the fish in the preheated oven and roast for 4-5 minutes. Remove fish from oven when done and coat with sauce. Garnish with parsley or chives.

Here's a deal not to miss! The Laundry Restaurant, East Hampton, has announced a special, three-course prix fixe for $19.80 per person, which offers a lighter bite for a lighter price. It's offered Sunday through Thursday evening. As well, the restaurant continues to offer their ultimate three-course prix fixe for $29 per person, also available Sunday through Thursday. There are choices for both prix fixes, and every course features some of The Laundry's favorites. The Laundry – established in 1980 – recently relocated to its current Montauk Highway location one mile east of East Hampton Village. Dinner is served 5:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. seven nights a week. For reservations call (631) 324-3199.

The Southampton Inn is now offering a cooking class the first Tuesday of every month at 7 p.m. The next class will take place on Tuesday, November 7th, at 7 p.m. at the Inn. Executive Chef Joe Hsu will take attendees on an international culinary cavalcade that will focus on the preparation of holiday dishes from around the world. There will be a food tasting following the preparation and an open wine bar throughout the event. The cooking class will cost $25 per person. Space is limited and reservations are recommended. For further information or to make reservations, contact Cara Fitzgerald at (631) 283-6500, ext. 779 or by email at cfitzgerald@southamptoninn.com.

The Olde Speonk Inn offers a $28 prix fixe Tuesday thru Thursday from 5 to 7 p.m. They also have Wednesday "Game Night" in their dining room with different games weekly. Thursday they offer a "Wine Lovers Night" where their entire wine list is half price when an entrée is ordered. Thursday night is also ladies night from 9 to 11 p.m. with $2 cosmos and apple martinis and $1 mixed drinks. For reservations or more information call (631) 325-8400.

In Sag Harbor, the Oasis Waterfront Restaurant and Bar offers a three-course prix fixe dinner menu Thursday, Friday and Sunday until 7 p.m. Choose an entrée and get an appetizer and dessert for the price of the entrée. Maybe the savings bank exterior is a fitting shell to house the treasured gem that is Matsulin. Sadly, it is that same exterior which prevents the unobservant eye from recognizing that this unique Asian fusion restaurant exists within. What makes Matsulin special, setting it apart from other restaurants in the area, is its varied pan-Asian menu as well as attention to authentic flavors and tastes.

In a single meal, my friend Victoria and I shared dishes from Malaysia, Thailand, Vietnam, Japan, and China. And this isn't your typical "Asian" food either. This isn't Moo Shu beef and pork Lo Mein, but classical platters tailored toward authenticity. It is in this standard that we found a truly delightful meal.

We sampled as much as we could. From the appetizer menu there was beef satay, Martini shrimp, crispy calamari, coconut shrimp, and roti canai. Everything came with its own dipping sauce. The peanut sauce for the satay had enough flavor that I would have been content eating it all night. The roti canai is a flat bread served with a light coconut curry sauce. Kicking up the heat was the Martini shrimp with a spicy yet sweet sauce and the coconut shrimp and its pimento sauce were an absolute pleasure to eat.

A special that evening was a steamed sea bass served whole in a Teachen sauce. The sauce actually derives from the Teachen area of China, where the parents of Kay and Vivian Lin of Matsulin originate. (In fact, almost all of the dishes are based on family recipes, which go back for generations.) The steaming process allowed much of the complementary flavored broth to be infused into the light, white fish. The vegetables, including tomato, coriander, and fennel, brought complex layers to the dish, without knocking the flavor out of balance. A completely different set of flavors was found in the lemongrass Tom-Yum. This Thai soup featured a little bit of curry spice, rich broth, mushrooms, celery, delightful coriander, and shrimp. If you like lemongrass, or have never tried it, this is the soup for you.

Of course, if you are going to sample Asian fusion at its best, sushi is a must. Kay had the chef prepare the sushi sampler and the Viper Roll (a specialty roll) so we could gain a grasp of the sushi chef's breadth as an artist. The fish was fresh and its textures and consistency were great. The presentation was equally striking.

The main courses, of which we sampled several, were all distinct unto themselves. The Ayam Mangga comprised of sliced chicken, mango, red peppers and mint, in a sweet and tangy sauce, served in two halves of hollowed mango. If you're into mango, it's a fun dish that is great for sharing. Actually, all the dishes are great for sharing, even though I really wanted to keep the King Rama Beef to myself – thin strips of beef cooked with baby green beans, in a great, sweet sauce with hints of allspice and anise.

Don't Let The Savings Bank Exterior Deceive You

Following that, we were offered a unique dish, which sounds unappetizing by its description and, in fact, is claimed to be an acquired taste. I guess I acquired it, because I really enjoyed the Sambal Shrimp. These large, perfectly cooked shrimp are served mixed with baby asparagus in a fermented sauce. Like I said, the word "fermented" gives it a bad wrap, but I would have no problem introducing the dish to friends next time, and there will be a next time, I dine there. I'll be honest, the final dish, Ginger Tea Duck, was my favorite. First, the duck is marinated in tea and ginger juice, then it is fried until crispy and served with a thickened, flavored version of the marinade. The crispy skin, tender duck meat, and the ginger tea sauce make for such a combination that I really did want more.

For dessert (I know, how could we possibly eat dessert after all that?) Victoria and I shared a tempura-fried banana with vanilla ice cream. Once again, the textures and layers of flavor made for a wonderful ending to our journey into the realm of fine Asian dining.

The only thing that made us happier was that we found Matsulin also served very reasonable lunch specials. Definitely worth a fieldtrip one day in the future.

Matsulin is open Tues.-Thurs. 11:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Fri.-Sat. 11:30 a.m. to 11 p.m.; and Sun. from noon to 10 p.m., but closed on Monday.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"AMERICAN INDIAN ENCOUNTERS" AT THE PARRISH MUSEUM

"Encounters" is a good word to describe Roy Lichtenstein's current exhibition at The Parrish Art Museum. While the artist has long been identified with Pop Art and his particular contribution, characterized by the animated (cartoon) engagement between figures, some of his other endeavors are unknown to the general public.

Even so, there is the same kind of engagement present in Lichtenstein's American Indian works, no matter what the medium or style. Starting with his charcoal drawings from the early 1950s through his Cubist-inspired oils, assemblages, Pop/Surreal sculpture, geometric abstractions, and oil landscapes from the late 1970s, the collision of objects, people, shapes and material was exerting itself in a unique, animated way. Thus, Lichtenstein's work was saturated with the spirit of life; his inanimate forms given a personality.

An initial charcoal drawing of an Indian on horseback, the horse engaging itself with the rider, is a good early example. The sense of movement was arresting, recalling the bison drawings on the Lascaux cave walls. Another ink wash work extends this idea of both motion and animation, featuring a horse rearing up on his legs.

Overlapping wood shapes produce engagement and movement in a different way: a 1955 abstract assemblage that celebrates an archetypal spirit. Thus, an inanimate object is given a personality and human dimension.

Lichtenstein's 1951 "The End of the Trail" showing an Indian on a horse also defines the concept of personification, as applied to the animal. This same idea is relevant to an abstract, surreal, Brancusi-inspired sculpture. The sense of vertical movement and compositional collision give the object a personae identified with strength and focus. In a word, the Indian spirit.

Lichtenstein's geometric abstractions also have a strong sense of movement, his juxtaposition of verticals, horizontals and diagonals not only encountering each other but also animating the picture plane.

Work by Roy Lichtenstein

Some of these oils represent the landscape while one is a profile of a single Indian. Lichtenstein's linearity is a recurring aesethetic in these later works; his configurations recalling Indian markings indigenous to the culture.

While Lichtenstein's Native American works are encounters in a formal way as his aesthetic elements make connection with each other, engagement is also evident via his Cubist influences (Picasso) and maybe even Klee. In this exhibition, his encounters with artists like Albert Bierstadt must also be considered.

Whatever sources Lichtenstein chose to use, however, one thing is certain: his astounding talent for giving life to his work.

"American Indian Encounters" will be on view at The Parrish Art Museum until Dec. 31.

HONORING THE ARTIST: THEODORE WORES

If you get a yearning to visit the garden featured on this week's cover of Dan's Papers, you might be disappointed. While it's Thomas Moran's actual garden, (the house is still standing at 229 Main Street in East Hampton), you'd be hard pressed to see the exact setting as Theodore Wores painted it, circa 1890.

But imagination runs high with this critic, so off we go to experience the original residence and grounds. It's an overcast sky that greets us on this late October day; the shingled structure, while in need of repair, still suggests a grandeur that is unique. The idiosyncratic architectural style also conveys uncommon qualities invoking the idea that Moran was perhaps a bit quirky himself.

There's a sense of narrative here, too: what stories could the old house reveal? Yours truly couldn't help but recall the old mansion in Great Expectations, the one inhabited by the late Anne Bancroft in the most recent film version.

Like the movie, Wores' garden painting also makes us imagine a time gone by, especially now that we have the opportunity to see the present site. Thus, Wores imbued the scene with a liveliness and spirit that has long disappeared: the colorful flowers, birdbath, hedges, a sunflower here and there. The ivy-covered walls. The work's impressionistic style reflected Moran's world view as well.

Wores is not known solely for painting Moran's garden, however. He was recognized as an early American Impressionist painter, the "best known artist working in San Francisco during the late 1890s and early 1900s." He also earned a reputation for being one of the first American artists to travel to Japan (1885-1887). That Wores was well-traveled was evident and added greatly to his artistic training. While his Japanese journey resulted in many Asian paintings as well, his trips to Hawaii, the Canadian Rockies and the Southwest also impacted on his work.

Yet Wores did not spend his entire life living on the West Coast; he settled in New York for several years, working and residing at the celebrated Tenth Street Studio Building which was the "first modern facilty to serve completely the artists' needs." It was here that Wores joined influential artists like William Merritt Chase and Frederick Dielman who used the studio to create works as well as to exhibit them.

Apparently, Wores' proximity to East Hampton motivated him to travel here, visiting Moran's home on probably more than one occasion. We're glad he did.

– Marion Wolberg Weiss

HEALTH, BEAUTY & FITNESS

Skin deep with Samantha Altea

Beauty Bon Voyage

When my sister-in-law came to visit from Malawi (no, she doesn't know Madonna, though they are both very involved with humanitarian issues over there), my perspective on beauty changed. We sat one evening, talking about her experiences living in an African country for six years, while at the same time casually flicking through magazines portraying feminine beauty as images of skinny, waif-like women, and Tricia commented that in Africa, as in many "third world" countries, a more robust woman indicates affluence, while a skinny gal evokes the notion of one who is starving, neglected and underprivileged. Therefore, big is beautiful. It's shocking when you compare this ideal to that of some of the celebrities we see these days, who look very much like those literally starving in third world countries. So what is beauty, really? As the saying goes, maybe it's in the eye of the beholder. Could it just be a picture of health, instead of many starving themselves to look a certain way? It got me thinking that perhaps other countries have something to teach us about how they stay good-looking and what they value as beauty. I decided to investigate.

Join me on my trip around the globe, where I found some world class beauty tips you may not have heard of.

A quick trip to Brazil, synonymous with waxing and bikinis might lead one to think that these are Brazil's only beauty claims to fame. But did you know that Brazilian women are very conscious of their skin, particularly of cellulite? Their native remedy…handfuls of wet sand that they rub onto their bodies, not only to erase cellulite, but to also invigorate the skin and stimulate blood circulation, giving these renowned beauties glowing skin. So why not head to the beach, it's only a hop and a skip away? Another Brazilian tidbit is that before going tanning, they drink carrot or beet juice, which they believe darkens the skin.

A longer jaunt, to Japan, reveals the secret to Japanese women's flawless skin. They have used Camellia oil for centuries to eliminate wrinkles, dark spots, flaws, and even stretch marks.

Whilst in Asia, one might as well hop over to China, where white tea is one of their beauty secrets. An antioxidant found in white tea has even headed west to become a fashionable cosmetic ingredient. Tea is also mixed with Rosemary in China – one answer to the glossy hair many Chinese women tend to have. The tea acts as a detoxifying agent and rids lank locks of impurities, leaving luscious locks behind.

Another Asian stop en route is India, where women also have beautiful, shiny, thick hair. The secret… coconut oil, which also helps if your hair is thinning. Women in India massage their scalps with it once a week! Smells good, too.

New Zealand is quite the trip (with an Australian husband, trust me, I know.) But some would say it's well worth it as it is home to the answer to any pesky, post-puberty zit. It's not too far from Asia, so I took a quick detour. New Zealanders banish bad skin by using a native plant, the Manuka tree. The extract from this plant has gained its healing reputation because of its honey-like antiseptic oil, which is also rich in minerals.

Heading now to Europe, and close to home for me (France is only an hour's hop from the UK), so this was a familiar jaunt. French women have a very important beauty tip, and one that some of us have lost sight of: less is more. They don't believe in vast amounts of makeup, or, in this new "Extreme Makeover" world, tons of plastic surgery. What they can teach us is to be comfortable with ourselves, and that growing old is not ugly, but rather just the opposite. An older woman, wrinkles an' all, is considered very beautiful. My hubby, who's obsessed with the now-63-year-old French actress Catherine Deneuve, would whole-heartedly agree.

While in Europe, Scandinavia is an easy destination; and the Scandinavians have a beauty treatment that's not to be missed, and it's free, too. H20. They drink at least 1.5 liters of spring water every day, plus splash their faces with the ice-cold stuff roughly 20 times a day, in order to revitalize the skin and reduce puffiness.

Lastly, I reminisced in Greece, where as a child I used to vacation regularly. One year as a ten-year-old, I got horribly sun burnt, and a wise old Grecian recommended we apply Greek yogurt to my painful skin. When the pain diminished, my mother was sold. Grecians use yogurt as a remedy for many skin problems, because of its lactose, minerals, vitamins and proteins.

Finally, arriving back in New York, I'm looking and feeling good. But I wish that I'd found a cure for jet lag whilst on my travels.

Briga-Dunes

Blue Nalgene water bottle: $12. New Balance sneakers: $44.99. Canon Rebel SLR: $179.99, after rebate. Acorn hiking socks: $8.99. Trident sugarless gum, spearmint flavored: $1.15. Hiking at the Walking Dunes in Napeague: Priceless.

My day began like any other, except for the fact that I could not stop thinking about what my fellow co-worker, Julia Nasser, had said to me the night before. She continuously raved about how beautiful the Walking Dunes were and how important it is for those who hike there to stay on the trail due to the heightened sensitivity of this geological phenomenon. Apparently, the New York State Parks Department has built a trail so that human movement would only lightly impact the natural movement of the dunes, and the State has threatened that if people venture off the trail, they may deny access altogether. I asked her where I could find these dunes, and she explained that they are located at the end of Napeague Harbor Road.

The sun was high around 1 p.m., and the midday wind seemed to pick up and shake the bay waves. I followed the road about a mile north of the highway and spotted an information kiosk and a sign with an arrow pointing east that read, "Walking Dunes." In my imagination, all I could picture were these dune-like creatures with grassy hair, walking with me at a snail-like pace, smiling. What I soon found was that they were better than anything I could have imagined. I parked my car, stretched, got my camera situated, tightened my hiking sneakers, and started on my journey.

The Walking Dunes are an active parabolic dune field, situated just to the east of Napeague Bay, and concludes less than three kilometers to the east of Hither Hills State Park's hilly terrain. Parabolic dunes are a special dune formation; completely dependent on moisture and vegetation, they grow in response to prevailing north to northwesterly winds. They migrate downwind, and are characterized by partially stabilized limbs that point upwind, with a blowout at the center of the dune that migrates faster than the limbs, hence the "walking" aspect. As the wind blows up their slopes, it accelerates and increases their ability to carry sediment.

On the first part of the trail, there is a large sign that reads: "These dunes are unique for Long Island. They are forever shifting due to the winds, and in some areas, have covered groves of trees 30' tall with the tops of the trees still being alive. Please do not take any vehicles or walk in the face of the dunes so they can be preserved in their natural state." As I walked along, I slowed my pace so as to not damage or disturb the ground below my feet. I watched while little birds swooped in from every direction, hiding in their tiny shelters found in the Russian olive, oak, shad and pine trees.

The land there seemed so sensitive; in fact, I could see animal tracks in the sand and was able to identify the footprints of at least one or two deer. There are many different ecosystems present here in the Walking Dunes–they include salt marsh, beach, dune, pepperidge swamp, cranberry bog, shrub swamp, oak-holly forest, and pitch pine forest. In total, there are five major dunes and Number 5, the youngest of the major dunes, advances at a rate of over six miles per year. As I headed southeast, towards the crest of Number 4, I noticed the stunning view of Napeague Bay. This is the highest point in the hike. I fussed around a bit with my camera, taking a few shots and, luckily, was able to catch my breath. Believe me, walking in the sand uphill is not easy. As I looked downhill, I spotted another sign signaling a new part of the self-guided hike.

At the bottom of the hill, I found myself in the Phantom Forest, and the sign read, "This area once contained a forest of pitch pine and oak, as the walking dune moved through the area, all the trees were completely buried underneath the sand and now all that remains of the forest are the dead trees you see here. As the dune continues moving in a southeasterly direction, more trees will be uncovered." After I read that, I really felt as though I was in some sort of fairytale; this entire area seemed magical, as if there were phantoms in the forest and on the dunes that walk.

As I worked my way through the twists and turns of the forest, I noticed many Monarch butterflies among the beautiful plant life as I got closer to the water. The Walking Dunes are a very special place here on the East End, and it is up to each of us to help preserve this unique area. I suggest you go out and try hiking the Walking Dunes; you can take some beautiful pictures, come in contact with rare and striking vegetation, and experience a priceless hike.

The Garden At Rock Cottage

by Lance Brilliantine

Fall Kaleidoscope

The growing season is going out in a glorious blaze this year. One of the pleasures of living on the East End of Long Island is the color palette of fall's display. There is nothing quite like the look of the East End in fall with its shades of mahogany, red, orange, brown, and yellow. Throw in the green of bamboo and evergreens, and the landscape is a kaleidoscope of bright colors and somber tones.

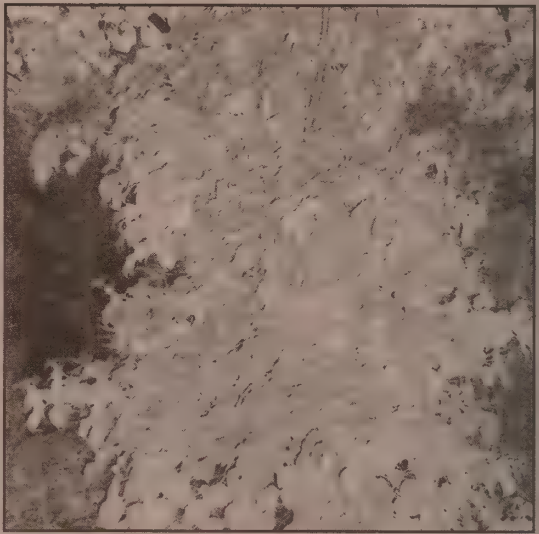
Because I attended school for so many years, fall is a time of year to buckle down and work. As such, it is a time for re-evaluation and consideration of successes and failures during the year, and of how thankful I am for the experience of gardening, which sustains and revitalizes me. Interestingly, every gardener I speak with says the same thing!

As gardeners, we are always making plant choices. For example, it was very easy to page through catalogs this fall to select the tulips and crocuses I want for spring. But I wonder how frequently we consciously make design choices when purchasing plants.

On my own part, I often purchase plants from the perspective of instant gratification rather than plants that provide longevity and design success. Too frequently, it seems, my plant selections have more to do with getting the garden started early and not necessarily with the strength to resist late summer and fall.

One of the biggest misconceptions about garden design is that flowers are the most important things. This is, of course, not true. If, like me, you are always just a little dissatisfied with the results of your garden, maybe it is time to think of another approach, or something new.

You might want to consider the "gardener's rule of green thumb," which states that, when selecting plants, "for every spring blooming flower you purchase, buy two that bloom late in the growing season. Having tested this idea, I can guarantee that your green thumb will seem more vibrant and rewarding, even during the first season. Not only will the period of enjoyment increase, but the garden will also look fresher and more appealing.



We must remember that plants produce flowers as a means of reproduction, not just for us to enjoy. Once seeds are generated, plants really have no further reason to survive. This is why deadheading some types of plants extends their blooming season (we trick them into thinking they have been unsuccessful at seeding.) On producing seeds, blooms fade and plants take on the appearance of collapse. Plants that bloom in late summer and fall have to maintain vigorous growth for several months while they prepare to flower and seed before winter. Simply put, this longer time period means that plants that bloom later in summer and fall

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Most people would love to own a house in the Hamptons but more specifically, most people would love own a beach house in the Hamptons. It is just not the oceanfront that buyers seek although the oceanfront is always in the highest demand. The beaches that stretch from West Hampton to Montauk are among some of the most desirable and the most valuable shoreline in the country. Water is everywhere on the East End and any piece of real estate near or in some reasonable proximity to the water is a hot commodity. To be on the water on the East End understandably comes with hefty price tag.

Oceanfront Bridgehampton

Prices on the shore will vary in accordance to just what Eastern shoreline you desire and there are so many forms of waterfront on the East End to choose from. Some prefer the bays and others prefer the wetlands. Some want the ocean and others like ponds or lakes. Boaters may look in harbor-side areas such as Three Mile Harbor in East Hampton, that allows for deep water dockage. A resort and marina here is currently on the market at $55 million. Sailors may look to an old captain's house on Shelter Island in the Heights where they can have a view of their mooring. For ocean beachgoers who want to be in the mix of things, maybe its Sagaponack or Bridgehampton. The surfing crowd wants the waves at Montauk whereas an artist may prefer the light on the wetlands in the Springs.

It is the distance between you and that water however, that will make all the difference when it comes to the price. North of the Highway, or South of the Highway, translated by Hamptons standards simply means near to the ocean or far from the ocean. In addition to the ocean there are canals, marshes, bogs, steep ocean cliffs, ponds, lakes, bays, sound front, inlets, and of course the oceanfront dunes. There are even islands, such a Shelter Island, Gardiners Island, and Little Ram Island.

A prime acre of oceanfront land in Southampton can cost as much as $10 million dollars. Howard Stern paid $20 million for just two last year–yes, just for the land. Tommy Hilfiger paid $18 million for a little less than 5,000-sq.-ft. home on Further Lane in East Hampton in the spring of this year.

A sizeable oceanfront home in the 5000 sq. ft. range on about an acre in Sagaponack would be priced at about $10 to $15 million. A more elaborate estate in the same area on the ocean consisting of 10,000 sq ft on more than 2 acres comes in at about $25 million. In the Amagansett dunes; not on, but near the ocean between $5 and $6 million will buy a similar sized beach house. This past season actress Gwyneth Paltrow and her family purchased a 7,000-sq.-ft. home in Amagansett for just over $5 million with views of the ocean. You can also buy a 23-acre ocean view farm in Amagansett for $40 million.

As prices have risen here, waterfronts have gone up dramatically and some owners are astounded when they learn the prices their estates will now bring. Many have sold for that very reason and have made an absolute fortune from their almost instantly grown equity. The market exploded over a very short three-year period. Numerous estates in Southampton could easily fetch $50 million if they were to enter the market today. Others are worth even more such as the 40 acre deMenil estate in East Hampton that East End realtors believe to be worth an estimated $90-$100 million. That property is also located on Further Lane. The price tags on the more elaborate or historically valued estates have become staggering. Three Ponds Farm, a lavish 60-acre spread in Bridgehampton is on the market for $60 million. The water on this property includes three private ponds that grace its grounds, one of which has been packed with trout. The Georgica Pond area is located in Wainscott, also a part of East Hampton, simply leads out to the ocean yet occupies some of the most desirable parcels of real estate on the entire East End. The peninsulas that make up what looks like a hand spreading out into the ocean, is filled with countless, ultimately private estates of the very rich and very famous. It is home to the estate of Steven Spielberg, Martha Stewart and Kelly Klein as well as a host of other prominent and celebrity residents. Just two years ago, Burnt Point, a 25-room mansion on 25 acres sold there for $42 million.

You can reach Diane at eastendrealest@yahoo.com.

typically have a better look than those that bloom earlier. Their foliage is fresher and better-looking. Actually, it is great-looking foliage that creates the landscape's backdrop and stage that allows whatever is blooming to look even better.

Think about the foliage of some types of fall-blooming plants. For example, mums are looking pretty good in the dog days of summer – with their deep green, resilient foliage. Japanese anemones, ornamental grasses, and late-blooming lilies all seem to take center stage in late summer and look fresher and more alive as fall arrives. Interestingly, many of these late blooming plants also provide an all-season backdrop of various textures and green hues that can sustain a garden design and make it appear more vibrant all season long.

At this time of year, when I am in a scurry to purchase those last dozen or so new tulip colors, and to dig in a few winter aconite to get the jumpstart on spring (as a gardener I just hate the doldrums of winter), I must constantly remind myself that there is a reason to put off instant gratification when gardening.

While I frequently forget the "gardener's rule of green thumb," perhaps writing about it in this column will inspire others to think of it, and help me remember it this year as an important rule for garden design success.

As you proceed through winter and wander through the pages of plant catalogs, I hope you will, as I will try to, remember the gardener's rule and purchase two plants that bloom late in the season for each one that blooms early on. Who knows, it might make a complete difference next fall in the kaleidoscope of colors we see in the garden.

ENOUGH I SAID

Dear Dan,

Enough chatter from Howard Dean, the insignificant chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Enough silliness originating from the mouth of Nancy Pelosi, the House minority leader, who found it too difficult from week to week to decide whether she was for an immediate pullout from Iraq, a partial pullout or an 'Extreme Makeover: Iraq Edition.' No more meaningless talk from Harry Reid, the Senate minority leader, which makes him a leader only in his own mind. Who cares what has-beens like Teddy Kennedy and Robert Byrd have to say? America wants to hear from Hillary.

HOME AWAY FROM HOME

Dear Dan,
Dear David,

I was THRILLED to find the Montauk Pioneer online this summer! (Though I was a little bored to find that it was all about fishing, boating, surfing, golfing.) Surely there is more going on in Montauk that just this. What about art? History? Real Estate?

Mostly, however, I am dismayed that there has been no update since early September (the September 8 issue.) What's up with that? Is the Montauk Pioneer only seasonal? I guess I would understand that, but I would read the Pioneer weekly if it were available. And it would be invaluable for real estate information.

The Pioneer is my FAVORITE! Any articles on Hither Hills and/or the Montauk Bakery are always welcomed. Also, history of Montauk and literature (history and novels) would be most welcomed reading for me.

I live in Chicago. I pine, longingly, for Montauk all the time, but I can hardly afford to visit these days, even for a weekend. I can more easily (and cheaply) go to Greece for many weeks for the same price. Sad, very sad. And I remember the days when we spent $7 a night to camp at Hither Hills. My siblings and I have tried repeatedly to get a campsite, but I guess there is a "CODE" that we are not able to break to get through the telephone lines. Again, so sad.

Feeling sad tonight. Missing my Montauk. But, thank you, thank you for putting the Montauk Pioneer online, at least for the summer. I look forward to next summer's issues.

I miss Montauk too, and I'm in Bridgehampton. –DR

OUI, SI, YA

Dear Dan,

My husband and I have a very, very simple solution to the traffic on Rt. 27. Why don't we do what the Europeans do...? The slower moving cars stay on the extreme right-hand side of the road and when the car in back wants to pass it just flashes it's lights the car in front knows it wants to pass and does so. No obscene gesture is offered or anything else. This really works. We live and drive in Europe four months of the year and this system is used on their very narrow, sometimes mountainous roads.

Miss your magazine when we're away from our home in Montauk.

THE BAND PLAYS ON

Dear Dan,

While it is always a surprise to see one's gap-toothed smile shining back at you (and boy, is my mother going to have something to say to me on that!), I must correct the caption that ran below it.

I am not "one of the two co-founders" of the Long Island Music Hall of Fame. Richard L'Hommedieu is the Chairman and Founder of the organization. Three years ago, he asked about a dozen people to attend a meeting at SUNY Stony Brook to discuss his vision. Out of that meeting, the first Board emerged. Beside myself, the Board included Tom Bensen and Marc "Doc Blues" Gresser (both, like myself, are Vice-Chairmen), Jim Faith, Amy Tuttle, Charlie McKenna, Bob Buchmann, Mike Ferrari, Norm Prusslin and Rich Hughes. Since that time, the Board has expanded to include Denis McNamara, Tony Traguardo, Barry Fisch, Jeff James, Allan Varela and Tom Needham. More information on all of us can be had at the website, limusichalloffame.org. Honestly, I'm just glad to be a soldier in Rich L'Hommedieu's army.

The article suggests that we "will" be a not-for-profit organization. The tense is wrong as we already are a registered 501(c) 3 and a state-registered museum. In other words, we are very legitimate.

Also, I'm an East Hampton resident and not a Sag Harborite. Other than that, Debbie Tuma's piece was quite accurate. (On the Board, I have the well-deserved reputation of being very picky.)

As the lone East Ender on the board, I have the misfortune of travelling up island for Board meetings. Beside looking for a travelling companion (and possible ride), I would like to extend an invitation to any Peconic County inhabitant who would like to get involved in the Long Island Music Hall of Fame. We need a stronger voice. If any one is interested, please go to the site and join up (it's free). Those with deeper interest and desire can contact me at richard.arfin@podarama.com.

The museum is currently in the process of collecting and acquiring memorabilia regarding Long Island-centric music of any genre. We are asking residents to crawl into their attics and scour their basements for any hidden gold that will enhance and illustrate our musical heritage. I ask that you contact me or the Board for further information on donations. It is a tax deduction, too!

Finally, our Gala far exceeded our goals and was truly a spectacular event. I believe that the good vibe of all concerned in creating the event (the board, the inductees, the presenters, the sponsors, the volunteers, the crews, the caterers, the limo drivers, et al.) flowed into the fans, the audience and the press. And I thank everyone for a night I will never forget.

All I can say is that we have great things planned in the days ahead that will instill a pride and sense of heritage to the residents, and especially the children, of Long Island. The physical museum, the traveling exhibitions, the scholarship program and future events are merely the tip of our terminal moraine.

Richard Arfin

This was such a great idea. –DR

Police Blotter

I KNOW EDDIE!

A funny police blotter story took place last week and is still ongoing. Eddie Ecker, a captain in the East Hampton Town Police Department, is having a joke played on him. About 750 bumper stickers were printed and given around town that say, "I know Eddie Ecker." The joke started because so many people in Montauk know Mr. Ecker and when they would get pulled over they would say, "I know Eddie Ecker!" to try to get out of a ticket. Gordon Ryan, a Montauk attorney, who is also a practical joker, came up with the idea and printed up the bumper stickers after many rookie cops told him about people telling them they know Eddie Ecker.

Pork Chops

$26.85 worth of pork chops were reported stolen from a house in East Hampton. The pork chops were taken from the home in early October, and as the investigation began, no forced entry into the house could be found. Police are busting chops.

Mailbox Theft

A mailbox was pulled out of the ground and taken from a man's home in East Hampton. Nobody knows how to send him Christmas cards now.

Drunk At A Vineyard

Two men became verbally abusive after getting drunk at a Hamptons vineyard according to the vineyard's manager. The two men reportedly made a big scene in the tasting room and threatened the manager á la the movie Sideways.

Boat Confusion

A woman on Shelter Island called police in a panic after she saw that her boat had been stolen off its mooring in the bay. The bay constable located the boat at the mooring after investigating the call. The woman then figured out that she confused her boat with somebody else's.

Art Thief

A man was arrested by Southampton Police after he was caught stealing several pieces of art from a restaurant on Main Street. Apparently the man walked into the restaurant and sat down to eat. He stayed and finished his meal and then proceeded to take the art off the walls.

Almost Got Away

A man in Southampton, who was wanted by the Suffolk County Police on burglary charges, was caught in the act of burglarizing a home by an officer after the officer heard an alarm going off at a nearby beverage distributor. When the man saw the officer, he made a getaway in his car, which he crashed. The perp then fled into the woods on foot. Helicopters, dogs and police were called in and the man was spotted in a tall tree. The man tried to get away from police by climbing higher, but lost his balance and came crashing to the ground where he was arrested. Criminals don't grow on trees, but sometimes, they fall from them.

Halloween

Although it just so happens that this police blotter goes to press on the night of Halloween, we can assure you that there are going to be reports of ghosts running in the streets, teenagers getting arrested for throwing eggs at houses, and many homes reporting that their candy cabinets have been raided.
